Ellsberg mistrial revealed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The judge in the Pentagon papers trial says he will declare a mistrial, dismiss the current jury and select a new panel.

U.S. District Court Judge Matt Byrne announced his surprising decision Friday less than two hours after receiving word that the 9th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals in San Francisco said it would be "foolish" to proceed with the current jury.

Byrne said he would issue his official ruling Monday, when defendant Daniel Ellsberg could be present.

Codefendant Anthony Russo was on hand for Friday's session but Ellsberg's attorney said he could not contact the former Rand Corp. employe in time for the hurriedly called session.

Russo said after Byrne's statement that the mistrial decision signified a "great victory" for him and Ellsberg. "With a new jury, I think we'll have much better chances," he said.

The trial had been in limbo for four months while the defense appealed the government's use of wiretap information and alleged partiapity of the jury.

"I am anxious to go to trial," Russo said. "But I don't want any shadows cast over this trial. I want it to be a fair trial."

Byrne said he would ask Ellsberg and Russo to swear again that they waive all rights to double jeopardy through the mistrial. Both have agreed previously to such a provision.

Byrne, who said last week that he felt the 12-member jury selected last August had remained impartial, reported that he was not in full agreement with the appellate court's recommendation.

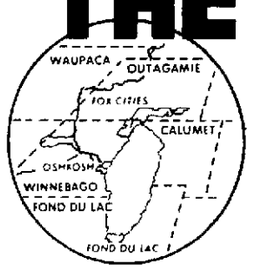

"However, in view of the language in the order of the court of appeals ... I believe the court of appeals is advising that there is a substantial danger that a case tried by this jury might be disturbed on appeal ..."

The judge said he went along with the recommendation because of the potential cost to taxpayers.

Defense attorney H. Peter Young said it could cost taxpayers $1 million to proceed with the original trial.

The trial had been scheduled to proceed next Tuesday on charges that Ellsberg, 41, and Russo, 35, are guilty of espionage, conspiracy and theft in connection with the leak in 1971 of top-secret documents on the Vietnam war to the news media.

45 killed in jet crash; probe is on

CHICAGO (AP) — A specialist team of federal safety investigators worked through dawn today to reconstruct the final moments of a United Air Lines flight which crashed in a residential area on its approach to Midway Airport, killing most of its passengers.

The Cook County morgue reported 45 bodies counted by mid-morning. A hospital said 18 survivors were admitted for treatment

Among the victims identified was Rep. George W Collins, D Ill Michelle Clark, a CBS television news correspondent, was among those tentatively identified at the morgue

It was not learned if any of the residents of the Southwest Side neighborhood were killed or injured when the Boeing 737 jet plunged from the sky and sliced through five single-family bungalows.

Ironically, several top officials of the National Transportation Safety Board were in Chicago concluding hearings into the Oct. 30 commuter train crash which killed 45 persons. They were augmented by a 10-man specialist team from Washington which arrived hours after the fatal crash.

Brad Dunbar, a ranking NTSB official, said the relative proximity of the airliner's broken sections should provide valuable information about the crackup.

The log book kept by the pilot, W. L. Whitehouse of Springfield, Va., believed among the dead, was found by one of the hundreds of Chicago firemen who rushed to the scene after the crash ignited blazes in several homes on W. 70th Place

A United Airlines spokesman said the plane, Flight 553 enroute from Washington to Omaha, Neb., with a stop in Chicago, had a 500-foot ceiling and one mile of visibility at Midway.

The Federal Aviation Administration control facility at Aurora reported no irregularities in the conversation between Flight 553 and the Midway tower during the flight approach.

The airliner missed the airport by a half mile and plummeted down in a neighborhood of tidy, closely built bungalows It skimmed over one roof and slammed through five other houses. The plane split and most of the victims were in the right side A tail section extended from one house and the shattered nose rammed through a home and came to rest in an alley

The plane departed Washington at 1 40 p m EST and was due at Midway at 3 31 p.m EST.

A clock in one of the crumbled homes was stopped at 3:29 p.m. EST. Midway tower reported it lost sight of the plane on its radar at 3.28 p.m.

At least 20 persons resided in the section of homes sheared by the jet, but many of the wives and husbands were either working or en route to schools to pick up children.

Marvin Anderson, a survivor treated and released from Holy Cross Hospital, said he sensed something was wrong when the pilot said the plane was about to land but Anderson could "see we were nowhere near the airport "

Anderson said the pilot revved the engines in what Anderson thought was a "hopeless effort to abort the landing."

"Only about five seconds after the engines were revved the plane went into a stall, the nose of the plane went up and the tail went down ... Then the tail hit a building and we crashed. But it seemed to me the landing was smooth," Anderson said.

"I don't remember any real panic in the plane," he added. "I heard some screaming but I can't remember much noise I could have blacked out."

"I looked around and I may have been dreaming but I saw a stewardess at the rear exit and people walking out. So I got up and walked out of the plane," Anderson said.

A Boeing spokesman said this was the first crash of a twin-jet 737 in which there were any fatalities. The 737 was flown first in May 1968 The 94-passenger plane is used by 37 airlines around the world and more than 300 are in use

Dunbar of the NTSB said it might be a month before the cause of the crash is determined Another federal official said the safety investigators are looking into unconfirmed reports that the jet received misinformation during its final approach.

Hundreds of firemen and policemen rushed to the scene to aid in rescue activities. A Chicago official set damage to the houses at $135,000.

Mayor Richard J. Daley visited the crash scene and was accosted by a neighborhood resident who grabbed the mayor's coat sleeve and said, "Get Midway Airport out of here and put it in the lake where it belongs."

Daley has long been a proponent of building a third Chicago airport in Lake Michigan but he also has been instrumental in trying to rebuild airline business at Midway which has become a limited traffic airport since the early 1960s when O'Hare International Airport was opened on the far Northwest Side

U.N. vote hits Israel occupation

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Egypt and nonaligned countries have won their biggest U.N. vote yet against Israeli occupation of Arab land, but its effect on settling the Middle East dispute is uncertain.

The General Assembly adopted the nonaligned countries' resolution late Friday, inviting states "to avoid actions, including actions in the field of aid, that could constitute recognition" of the occupation.

The vote for the 19-nation proposal was 86-7 with 31 abstentions—compared to a 79-7 vote with 36 abstentions last year when a shorter and milder Middle East resolution was being considered.

Some observers speculated that the new resolution could be used by Egypt to stem demands by those pressing for war with Israel and thereby gain time for an eventual settlement.

Israeli Ambassador Yosef Tekoah told the assembly Israel would not be "engulfed by numbers" and would treat the new resolution "in a matter befitting a spurious document." Tekoah called for an IsraeliArab dialogue to settle their differences.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush made it clear the United States would not cut off aid to Israel, in which it leads the world.

The United States abstained from voting on Friday's resolution after the Assembly defeated 65-24, with 34 abstensions, its bid for a separate vote on the reference to aid.

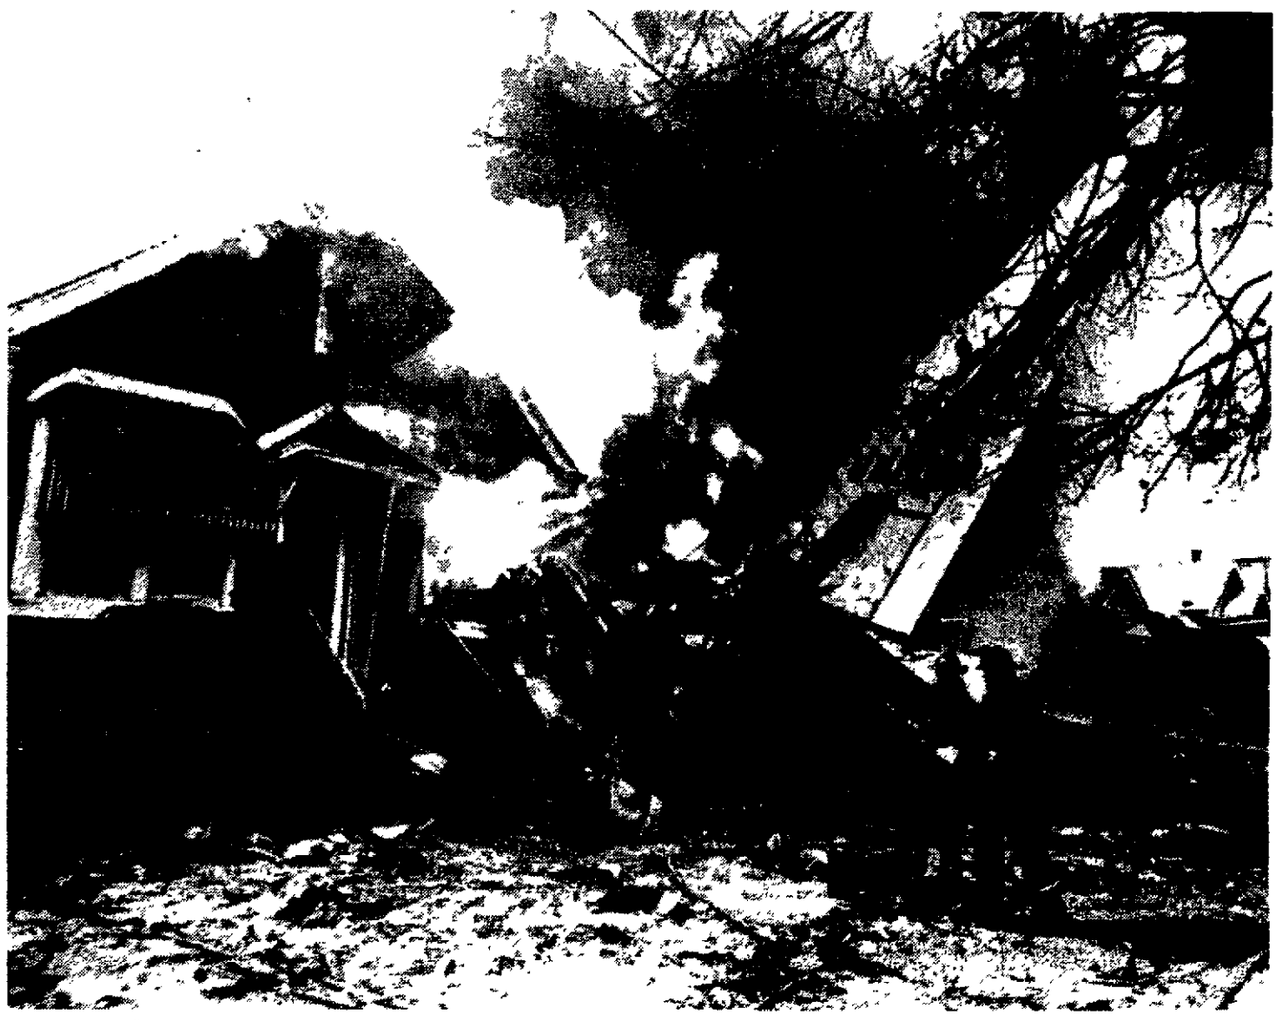

Bush said the new resolution, "upset the careful balance" of the 1967 Security Council decision and the assembly could not expect that it would establish a new basis for peace in the Middle East.

The 1967 resolution calls for Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories and recognition of the sovereignty of all Middle East States within secure borders.

In another development Friday, the United States admitted defeat for its plan to have the world organization take action against international terrorism.

U.S. Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett Jr. declared he supported a compromise resolution asking the International Law Commission to prepare an antiterrorist treaty "as soon as practical."

Bennett had denounced an Arab-backed resolution as nothing but "a prescription for talks." The measure calls for a study of the underlying causes of terrorism. However, this is given the best chance for approval when it comes to a vote Monday.

Death and destruction

Chicago firemen prepare to extinguish a fire after a United Airlines plane crashed into Chicago's southwest side neighborhood Friday afternoon. Numerous persons, including crew members, were reported to have perished. At the right is an unidentified survivor being aided by area residents before he is taken to a Chicago hospital.

The plane was at her front door

CHICAGO (AP) —Lying on her living room couch, Cindy Sladewski heard a jet plane approaching, apparently gliding in for a landing at Midway Airport a half-mile away.

"I said to myself, "That's low That's real low. My God! That's low!" Mrs. Sladewski said after a Boeing 737 had sliced through her house, leaving only one wall intact.

The Friday afternoon crash took the lives of 45 persons. Eighteen persons were taken to hospitals for treatment

There were no reports of any occupants of the houses being killed.

Few people were at home in this working class neighborhood occupied primarily by descendents of Eastern European immigrants. Husbands were at work and children were just coming home from school

"Then I heard crashes," Mrs Sladewski said, "like metal crashing into concrete. Then the house jumped "

The plane destroyed two brick bungalows Four others were severely damaged by the crash and resulting fires.

"I really don't know how I came out of it alive. I crawled out of the wreckage. I couldn't make it to the front door because there was plane all over there," Mrs. Sladewski said

Once outside, she said she saw a stewardess helping two persons out of a plane door and then saw flames beginning to engulf the wreckage The house next door was a pile of splintered wood.

"I ran towards the corner where my two children would be coming home from school and I yelled at the children to stay away," Mrs Slasewski said

She was not injured.

Apollo 17 crew arises hour late

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Three astronauts turned 'sleepy heads" awoke today for final dress rehearsal of man's last planned visit to the moon It took nine calls from earth and a triple play of a college fight song to get them up—an hour and four minutes late.

"We're asleep," was the first response from Apollo 17's Eugene A. Cernan, Harrison H. Schmitt and Ronald E. Evans to the persistent efforts to rouse them.

"That's the understatement of the year," said Mission Control's Gordon Fullerton.

"That was some party last night. Man what a humdinger," replied Cernan, commander of the flight, which will arrive in lunar orbit Sunday for a Monday touchdown on the moon.

"Never let Evans on watch," Cernan went on

Evans was responsible for receiving the morning wakeup, which started with a rendition of the Jayhawk fighting song of the University of Kansas, his alma mater

Mission Control played the song two more times during the next hour, made seven verbal calls, used a buzzer once and finally sent a screeching signal through the spacecraft

"Eventually we may get these sleepyheads awake," Mission Control said at one point, theorizing the communication ear plug may have slipped from Evans' ear

The rehearsal routine was a familiar one for the three astronauts, donning space suits, activating switches and awakening the lunar lander named Challenger

But this time there's a key difference The moon, soaring in black space just ahead, is only one day away.

The men of Apollo 17 were rested, ready and on target for their lunar adventure They perform the real thing Monday when Challenger sets down on the moon for an exploration science

Democrat struggle is at hand

WASHINGTON (AP) —The prophetic fight for the Democratic party chairmanship climaxes today as insurgents seek to fire Jean Westwood and replace her with Dallas lawyer Robert Strauss.

Strauss, running with the support of a conservative-moderate coalition seeking to re-impose its traditional party control, claimed to have 110 votes to elect him chairman

But he conceded there was some doubt over whether all of these would first take the dramatic and highly unorthodox step of first deposing publicly the head of a major political party.

A 105-vote majority would be enough to carry either issue, but Mrs Westwood, who says she will force Strauss to evict her before he can run for the office, claimed 115 votes against a motion to remove her.

Mrs. Westwood, handpicked by George McGovern for the chairmanship after his presidential nomination last August, has been under heavy pressure to quit ever since his landslide defeat in November

Strauss, a former party treasurer and one of its most successful money raisers, has the backing of a bloc of labor leaders disgruntled over the McGovern nomination, party conservatives led by a core of Southern governors, and moderates saying they want the party pulled back toward centerfield

Nixon changes continue

CAMP DAVID Md (AP) — After completing his second-term Cabinet selections, President Nixon is moving to shake up middle and upper levels of far flung federal bureaucracies

The President announced Friday that Richard G Kleindienst will remain as attorney general and thus rounded out the Cabinet team he will have at his side when he is inaugurated on Jan 20 At the same time the chief executive disclosed that five key Justice Department aides and two Interior Department officials are leaving the government

The five Justice Department officials are Deputy Attorney Gen Ralph E Erickson Lee Loftus Assistant Attorney Gen Jerris Leonard and three assistant attorneys general— David Norman, Roger C Cramton, and Leo M Pellerzi

Leonard reportedly asked to be relieved of his post

White House press secretary Ronald L Ziegler told newsmen at this rainswept presidential retreat that Erickson and Norman will receive judicial appointments The other three Justice Department officials are returning to private life, he said

So are the two Interior Department officials—Indian Affairs Commissioner Louis Bruce and Harrison Loesch, who as assistant interior secretary was in charge of public land management

Ziegler also disclosed another major change, announcing that Yale Law professor Robert H. Bork, who helped draft the administration's antibusing proposals, is being nominated to succeed retiring Solicitor Gen Erwin N Griswold

The spokesman said the President also will nominate Chicago attorney Jewel Lafontant as deputy solicitor general She will be one of the highest ranking blacks, as well as one of the highest-ranking women in the second Nixon administration

No women and no blacks are among Nixon's nominees for the second term Cabinet Asked about this, Ziegler said the President had sought out the best qualified individuals and in any event already had forged an impressive record in bringing blacks and women into high level posts

But, Ziegler said the President absolutely will not appoint people for the purpose of tokenism "

Alliance hits policies of council on justice

NEENAH — If the Wisconsin Council on Criminal Justice passes its $11.5 million budget Monday, it'll be over the strong objections of the Alliance of Cities.

The lack of local input into the budget — which is financed through federal funds — and the surprise release of the 342-page document a week ago has irked the alliance and members were urged to appear in person Monday when the council is scheduled to act on the budget.

It was Milwaukee who brought the issue to the alliance meeting Friday. George Wittow, fiscal liaison director, and William Carey, of his department, explained that the federal law, establishing the funding, is specific in calling for local input into the annual program.

Both charged that Walter Kelly, council director, was "forcing his own philosophies on the local municipalities. We feel that the local units are better able to determine their needs," Carey pointed out.

He also pointed to $1.6 million in the budget being earmarked for defender services while only $256,000 was being spent on prosecution. "There appears to be an inbalance there," Carey said.

Whittow was adamant in insisting that "we don't need three social workers for each policeman. They've changed the whole program from hardware to social programs," he charged.

Roger Schneider, Sheboygan mayor, citing a tieup in red tape which resulted in canceling a program there this year, and a representative from Green Bay called for looking deeper than just the budget. "I think we should take a look at the whole structure," Schneider said.

Dan Vande Hey, who is acting state planner for the entire program, agreed that some revamping might be needed. "I can understand the frustration on the local level" he said, promising that with the appointment of regional commissions, local input would be back in 1973.

"The law enforcement assistance administration (LEAA) says that 75 per cent of the funds must go to the local level and this can't be changed unless the local level signs off — so you do have control," he said.

Obviously irked and fired up by the debate, the alliance members passed a resolution calling for a delay in passing the budget and strongly urged each of its members to be on hand Monday when the council is scheduled to meet.

Cooperative purchasing idea gaining among state cities

BY DOUG KOPLIEN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — Cooperative purchasing between municipalities has met with a lot of success and there appears to be a growing number of Wisconsin governmental units who will be getting together to stretch the tax dollar.

Donald Hassler, Neenah, head of the Department of Local Affairs and Development (DLAD) cooperative purchasing program, had an attentive audience here Friday as he spoke to the Wisconsin Alliance of Cities.

"A dollar saved is a dollar less on the tax levy," Hassler said, urging the leaders of Wisconsin's 16 largest cities to get into the program which he's trying to develop.

Results of an experiment in cooperative purchasing organized by Hassler — a joint purchase of traffic paint will be known in a couple of weeks when bids are opened.

Hassler predicts that municipalities may be able to save as much as a dollar a gallon on the $46,000 purchase.

The program received the strong endorsement of William Beyer, alliance executive secretary who suggested that the next commodity to be purchased jointly should be tires for municipal fleets.

The paint purchase program which includes several municipalities from Milwaukee to Green Bay, involved DLAD drawing specifications and the bidding procedure handled through Milwaukee which already has conducted a test to determine the municipal needs.

Prior to this, some municipalities had purchased paint through the State of Wisconsin, but this year the state switched to a hot paint application so municipalities had to go it alone.

Although it's a small item in most municipal budgets, Hassler hopes to be able to document cash savings and expand to other commodities.

Cooperative purchasing is nothing new. Hassler pointed out that as far back as 1931, Hamilton County, Ohio, started it and within the first 18 months documented cash savings of $400,000, or about 14 per cent.

Since then, others have developed nationwide and in Hennepin County, Minn., 49 municipalities have joined. Example of costs savings: in purchase of 112 automobiles, savings ranging from $100 to $700 per vehicle were recorded.

"Now, they have started to sell the old vehicles at auctions and are realizing more money than they did on trade-ins," Hassler pointed out.

He also cited examples in Wisconsin, such as in Milwaukee where 19 school districts and 19 municipalities have cooperated on purchasing and the school districts realized savings of 7 to 20 per cent.

"In buying gasoline, the price ranged from 11.09 cents a gallon to 28.5 cents a gallon, a 257 per cent difference," Hassler noted, adding that through a joint program all municipalities could get the lowest price.

"The aim of our program is to encourage a more scientific approach to purchasing," he said, adding that the department could have a manual ready for distribution sometime in 1973.

"One of the reasons for the lack of joint purchasing is a lack of information. For that reason we're scheduling seminars and the first one is going to be in Appleton on Feb. 8," he explained.

Hassler said a "state clearing house for purchasing information is going to be established" in Madison. It'll offer a bank of information for purchasing data and "the dissemination of information will be done on request, free of charge."

He also plans an area and regional approach by trying to get municipalities together to purchase together.

"We know there are roadblocks, but most of them are imaginery — not real. The first step is to get together and discuss the problem. And then develop specifications to meet everyone's needs and then pick a commodity.

"There's a savings in volume buying and everybody wins. You win by doing a better job; the supplier wins by going into larger volumes, and the taxpayer wins by getting more value for the tax dollar," he said.

UW, VTAE facilities sharing plan for 2 cities approved by regents

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The University of Wisconsin and the state Vocational, Technical and Adult Education (VTAE) system would "double up" to share already existing facilities in Rice Lake and Fond du Lac under a plan approved Friday by the UW Board of Regents.

The board, meeting at the UW campus here, also agreed not to seek a second state law school at this time, preferring instead to maintain and promote growth of the present Madison campus law school.

The VTAE board must still approve the building-sharing plan, which was offered as an alternative to suggestions that UW close the low population, two-year centers and turn the physical facilities over to the vocational system.

Regent Bertram N. McNamara, Milwaukee, who worked on a committee studying the proposal, said the two UW centers have too few students for available space, while the voc centers are short of space.

He said the pilot program, pegged for three years, could lead to wider-ranging cooperation between the two systems.

Other regents said the plan represented a stepping-stone to more complete cooperation between the two state systems of higher education.

The plan also included: Coordinating of curricula so course overlapping is eliminated; lowering the UW fee schedule on the two campuses to parallel the vocational system fee guide, and complete sharing of all physical facilities on an equal basis.

The VTAE board has not made a recommendation on the plan.

McNamara said another proposal before the four-man committee—a total merger of the UW and vocational systems—was not realistic because the legislature, not regents, has the power to make such a decision.

But "if we fail in this cooperative venture," he said, "we will be faced with possible legislative action that will make the decision for us. We may then end up with a super board of education over all of higher education in the state."

In deciding not to pursue a second law school, the board accepted the suggestion of UW President John C. Weaver.

Weaver based his recommendation on a recent study committee report which concluded that while demand for legal education was growing, it was not sufficient to justify another public law school.

Weaver said legal education would not be neglected, and promised strong efforts at obtaining more money from the legislature so the Madison law school may maintain high academic standards.

The regents named Joseph W. Wiley, 38, as new assistant to the president of the UW system with responsibility for equal employment opportunities for minorities.

Wiley will work under Weaver's direction, helping develop programs to assure quality employment for minority groups within the UW system.

UW regents also:

—Referred back to the council of chancellors a proposal for systemwide visitation rules in university dormitories. Regents asked chancellors to prepare a plan for their January meeting which takes into consideration the independence of each campus.

—Commended UW-Superior Chancellor Karl Meyer for his handling of a "potentially dangerous" racial situation on his campus late last month.

Slick roads cause rash of accidents

OSHKOSH — Winnebago County drivers and some visiting drivers had some difficulty adjusting Friday and early this morning to the first really slippery, icy roadways of the season.

County police recorded some 15 accidents on roadways outside the cities in about 12 hours from early Friday afternoon to this morning. Patric Jon Minehan, 18, 137 Jackson St., Neenah, was taken to Theda Clark Hospital, Neenah, for treatment of chest and hip injuries.

He was one of three persons in a car driven by Thomas J. Oskar, 19, 100 Mitchell Ave., Neenah, when it was involved in an accident just before 2 a.m. on State 114, Town of Vinland.

Carol A. Martino, 34, Fond du Lac. was taken to St. Agnes Hospital, Fond du Lac, after her car left state 45 south of Black Wolf Road about 2 a.m. police said her right eye was cut and her face injured.

A school bus was involved in an accident on County Trunk A, south of South Park Drive, Town of Neenah, about 2:30 p.m., Friday. Six children and two drivers escaped injury.

There were also seven minor accidents in Menasha but none resulted in injuries.

Cars driven by Clintonville and Milwaukee residents were involved in an accident on State 45 at State 150 at 2:20 p.m., Friday and two people were advised to see their doctors for treatment of minor injuries.

City of Oshkosh police tallied some 26 accidents during the same period of slippery driving conditions. Christmas shopping and longer Friday store hours added to the traffic.

Most of the accidents were fender bender variety although Jan Fillmore. 22,912 Georgia Gardens, was advised to see a doctor for treatment of a sore neck. The car in which she was a passenger was involved in a three-car collision ata astop sign on Oregon Street at Sixth Avenue about 11 p.m.

Earlier unreported instances of property damage, a front porch, a planter in Menominee Park, power poles, were still reaching police headquarters early this morning as officers patrolled the city in daylight.

Winneconne may go to summer classes due to split-shift

WINNECONNE — There's a possibility that, come the 1973-74 school year, students here will be attending classes far into summer months.

This week the board of education heard a proposal from Supt. Jann Peterson that would extend the school year considerably for students in grades 6-12 who are losing time in the classroom as a result of the split-shift scheduling.

While elementary grades K-5 would maintain a normal school year, middle school, grades 6-8, would begin Aug. 23 and complete the school year on June 8. High school students would begin Aug. 23 and not complete the school year until July 26, thus extending the school year by about 39 days.

The Winneconne district initiated the split-shift scheduling in September of 1971 due to severe shortage of classroom space. Efforts have been made since 1968 to construct a new facility.

Four bond referendums, however, have been defeated by district residents. A fifth effort to obtain citizen support for building has been in the works for some time, led by a 30-man committee. And another referendum may be before the people the school year is out.

In proposing an extended school year, Peterson's aim was to increase the time students spend with their teachers in order to meet minimum requirements by the state's Department of Public Instruction.

Peterson stated in his proposal, "Our children have to compete with other children following graduation in the labor market and in advanced education universities. Therefore, I feel that extending the school year is the best step to take."

Peterson also termed the move necessary in order to give students "an equal opportunity in education as other children in the State of Wisconsin."

Friday, Peterson pointed out that minimum DPI standards require that students in grades 6-8 spend 360 minutes per school day with teachers. Split-shift scheduling in Winneconne provides the middle school students with only 294 minutes per day.

Students in grades 9-12 in Winneconne are spending 282 minutes per day with their teachers while DPI minimum requirements call for 385.

By extending the school year, Peterson stated, the district would come very close to meeting the minimum requirements.

Peterson said he has not yet talked his proposal over with the professional staff, nor has he yet received any feedback from the community. He plans meeting with the faculty next week and realizes that extending the school year will affect salary negotiations slated to begin after the first of the year.

Peterson has estimated that the cost of extending the school year would be in the neighborhood of $116,000

Incinerators to be back in operation Tuesday after fire

MENASHA — Incinerators at he Neenah-Menasha sewerage plant should be back in operation by the middle of the week after a stubborn fire Thursday night that took firemen five hours to extinguish.

According to plant manager Robert Bues, "unless we find any major damage to components, the incinerators should be back in operation by Tuesday or Wednesday."

The fire began at about 6 15 p m Thursday and was fought by firemen until 11 p m. Apparently no damage was done to the rest of the plant though extensive maintenance was required to clean up water.

Incinerators were not in operation at the time of the fire in order to make repairs to breeching walls. Cause of the fire has not been determined, but is suspected to be either spontaneous combustion or hot ash which recently had been hauled into the plant.

Change recommended for traffic department

CHILTON — Several recommendations regarding setting up a new depositing system for the traffic department were discussed Friday with members of the Calumet County finance committee, Dist. Atty. Franklin Schmeider and Marlyce Glysch, municipal auditor for the state Bureau of Municipal Audit.

It was recommended that a new rubber stamp be purchased for the traffic department, designating "For Deposit Only, Calumet County Traffic Department." It was further recommended that all receipts of cash and cash items be limited to the radio operators.

Prior to this time, checks paid to the traffic department for accident report copies were endorsed by a use of a stamp designating "Calumet County Traffic Police, Victor Juno, captain," and cashed in a local bank other than the working bank of the county.

Another recommendation calls for the verification of all cash received by the operators from one operator to the other when they leave their shifts. The bookkeeper will verify each of the cash receipts and prepare her deposits, which will now be made to the county treasurer at least once a month.

Previously, Juno would make deposits once or twice a year.

A $25 working fund to make change also will be set up in the sheriff's department.

The new bookkeeping system was devised after a routine audit of the traffic department revealed financial discrepancies in the traffic accounts.

The whole matter was more or less shrugged off as "sloppy bookkeeping" by county officials.

Juno turned $1,485.31 over to the county treasurer on Nov. 17, more than a week after a state auditor went to the district attorney with certain undisclosed information.

The money Juno paid to the treasurer, for the traffic department he heads, was to cover parking ticket fines and revenue from accident report sales accounts, according to the receipts he was issued.

In an interview with Miss Glysch after the meeting, a reporter asked if any discrepancies were noted in last year's audit. She replied that payments of the fines "were not timely."

Winneconne tips Weyauwega

WEYAUWEGA — Weyauwega lost ground as the game progressed, (scoring 12-12-10-9 in the four quarters), while Winneconne reeled off a more consistent offense and topped the hosts 59-44 Friday

Winneconne boosted their East Central Conference record to 3-1 with the victory while the Indians dropped to a 1-3 slate.

Winneconne held just a 4-point lead after three quarters but poured through 20 markers in the final eight minutes to clinch the contest.

Jim Fahley was the game's high scorer with 24 points. Dave Reinders, also of Winneconne, added 12.

Weyauwega was led by Brian Buchholz's 14 points.

Neenah town firemen extinguish truck blaze

NEENAH — Town of Neenah firemen were dispatched about 11:30 p.m. Friday to a fire reported by Neenah police. They found a truckload of coke burning at the A. E. Schultz Co., Town of Neenah.

State writing pollution code for disposal of animal waste

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — After months of deliberation, consultation with agricultural experts and numerous hearings to which farmers were invited, the Department of Natural Resources is preparing to write orders controlling the management of animal wastes on the state's 60,000 livestock farms.

The provisions of a code prepared under the direction of a 1971 legislative act has been presented to the board of natural resources, which says it will consult with the state board of agriculture on the issues involved at a joint meeting next month.

Workshops slated

In February the University of Wisconsin agricultural extension service will hold a series of animal waste workshops around the state for final assurance that the agricultural industry is aware of the pending regulation and that livestock farmers understand it.

Under the terms of the law, the code will then be presented to the agricultural committees of the state Legislature, which under the provisions of law will be empowered to approve it and make it effective, but also may reject it if it is found to be unsatisfactory.

Provisions of the control plan were worked out with the assistance of specialists of the University of Wisconsin and were widely circulated to their members by the major farm organizations. The question has aroused considerable interest in the country as a whole because of this state's rank in livestock husbandry.

Draft order

Contrary to some beliefs, the draft order does not expressly command that farmers collect and store wastes in a tank, stack, or pond in order to control run-off. Its declared objective is to prevent drainage or seepage of liquids into ground water. If that goal requires a special manure storage system, the code will set out standards of compliance. Winter manuring won't be prohibited, but approved land disposal practices will be suggested for those farms not having storage facilities. The general goal is to provide that farmers, like others, do not violate the provisions of the state water quality standards laws.

State acquires land on Whitcomb Creek

Post Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — State acquisition of about 2,120 feet of frontage on Whitcomb Creek, one of the favorite native brook trout streams in Waupaca County, has been announced by the state Department of Natural Resources.

The purchase will protect "this valuable resource" and provide public access for shoreline fishing and public parking, the agency said. The property was obtained by the state in exchange for about 14 acres of land granted to Stanley and Rose Carlson of Neenah.

State water clean-up code eased to match federal law

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Because of new federal law, the state board of natural resources has approved what it calls a more "flexible" rule for enforcing water pollution control deadlines directed to industries and municipalities.

Meeting here Friday, the board said where there is a showing of good faith effort to accommodate the state requirements for pollution abatement installations or their improvement, it will provide extensions as a means of accommodating the conflicting standards of the federal law.

The decision will be especially important in some districts, including the Fox River Valley and other localities within the Lake Michigan basin facing compliance deadlines next year.

Federal codes

The new federal standards are less demanding, and may permit compliance with clean water standards as late as 1977, it was said.

In another major action, the board adopted an order containing rules for the surveillance and monitoring of industrial effluents discharged into public waters and air emissions subject to control under the state air pollution control laws, including a schedule of fees to be assessed by the state to cover the costs of such work.

Monitoring was ordered by the legislature two years ago in an act which authorized charges upon industries and others to provide a file of data that could be used to prepare air and water pollution abatement orders. The rules and the fee schedules were evolved after extensive hearings during the last year.

Fee schedule

The monitoring information will, in effect, be used to finance enforcement of the pollution orders, officials explained. The board adopted the schedule which provides for annual fees of up to $10,000, although there was some discussion about asking the legislature to change the schedule to permit higher charges against private corporations with multiple pollution sources.

The monitoring data will be stored in computers and provide ready support for possible revision of air and water pollution orders, as well as prosecution for violations of their provisions.

The order expressly asserts it is not a "licensing program for effluents and air emissions," but a tool for enforcing pollution controls. They are subject to change, moreover, according to increasing control technology and knowledge on the effects of air and water contamination.

The DNR water protection staff said that one of the reasons for the more "flexible" deadline policy on compliance with water pollution abatement orders was a realization of the financing obstacles encountered by some defendants in pollution proceedings, and notably municipalities.

Some outstanding orders had demanded completion of abatement installations at the end of this year and it became apparent that some municipalities and others could not comply in spite of good faith efforts.

In the Fox River Valley many orders outstanding contain deadlines for 1975 at the latest. The federal goal is strict compliance with approved standards two years later. To insist adamantly on literal compliance with the previous state orders in all cases, officials said, would be unfair in view of the latitude extended in the new federal law, and the good faith effort made by municipalities especially.

The more lenient plan was brought in by a subcommittee headed by Richard Stearn of Sturgeon Bay.

Harold Adams heads Project 76 committee

Harold Adams, president of the First National Bank of Appleton, has been appointed chairman of the Project 76 Committee of the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce, Chamber President Gerhard Willecke announced Friday.

Adams is also a director of Project 76, Inc., a nonprofit corporation formed to work with the Appleton Redevelopment Authority in initial financing and organization of a downtown redevelopment project.

The chamber's Project 76 Committee is a citizen action group organized to involve a broad cross-section of community interests in the redevelopment program, assisting the corporation and the redevelopment authority.

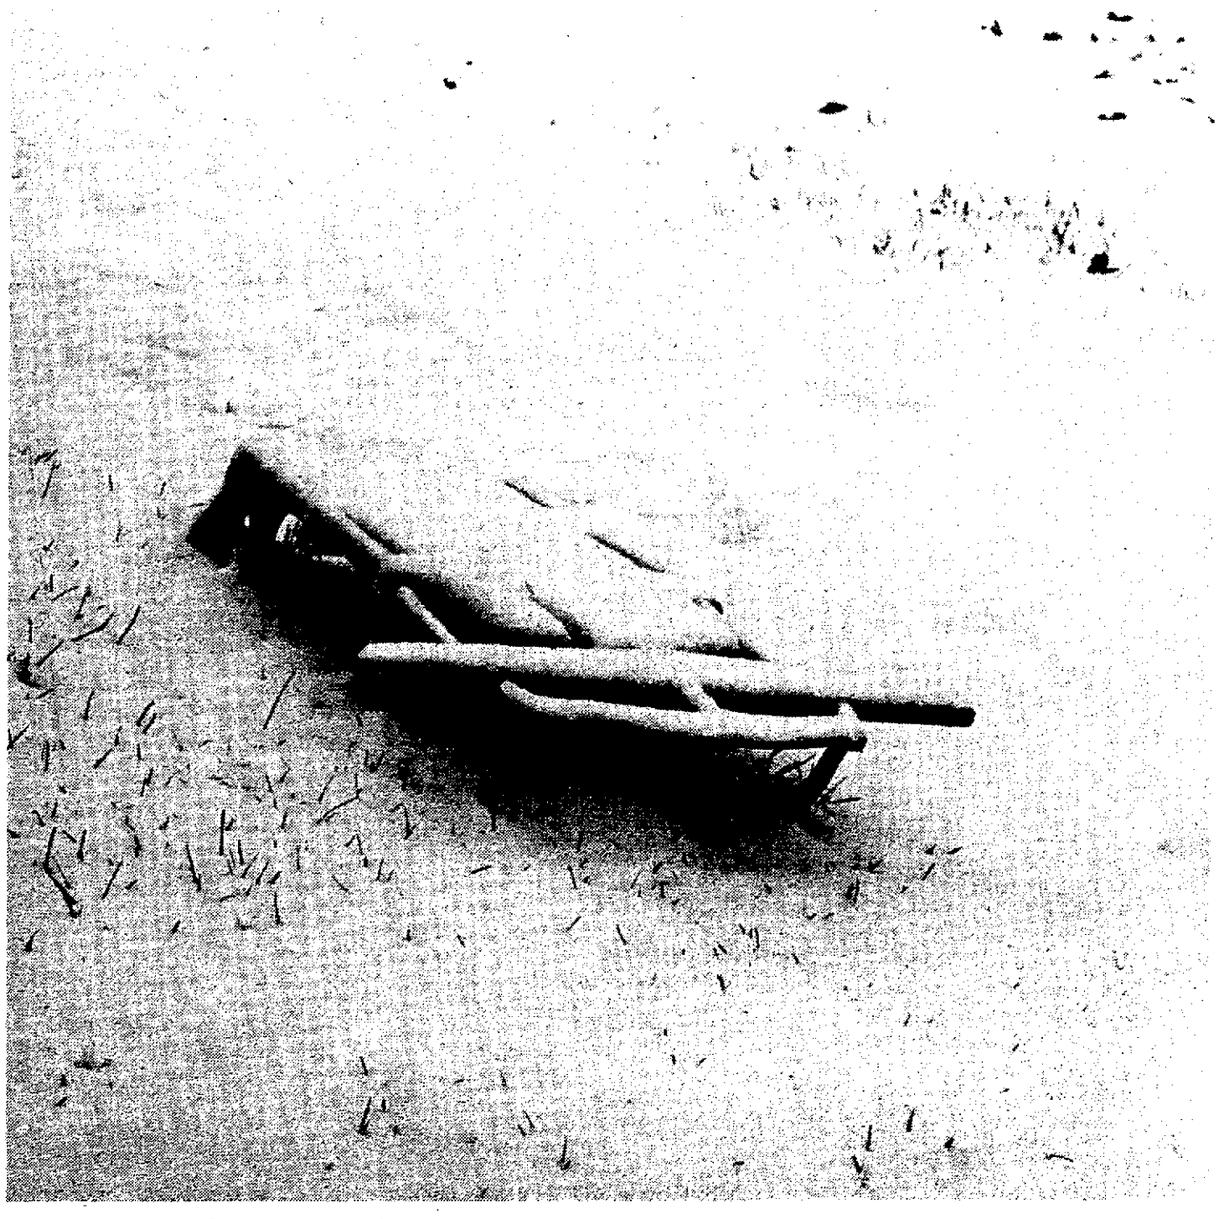

Willecke said Adams, as past chairman of the Chamber's Project 80 Committee, has knowledge and background needed for his new chairmanship.

Willecke said the new committee will hold its first meeting sometime in January, after the holiday season when members will have time to devote full attention to launching the organization.

He said Adams already has met with organizations having representatives on the committee and officials involved in the redevelopment program, to prepare the committee's first agenda.

He said suggestions for committee activities have been received and are being kept on record for consideration. One proposal is the purchase of a replica of the Liberty Bell, which is currently being duplicated in miniature by the firm in England that cast the original bell.

Willecke also reminded local organizations that some have not yet named their representative to serve on the committee, which he said is intended to represent communitywide interests and to undertake projects throughout the Appleton area.

A lonely snow-covered sled waits for someone to clean off the blanket of snow and to take it swishing down a hill. The sled will probably see more activity with the coming of the holidays and vacation from school. (Post-Crescent photo)

County to face at least one battle

December normally would be a quiet month for the Outagamie County Board with Tuesday's meeting coming on the heels of the five-day November budget meeting, but at least one major battle is expected and a second one is in the background.

A request from the airport committee for authority to hire an architect to design a new airport terminal building is expected to draw sharp debate from several quarters on the board.

The committee is seeking an okay to take $5,000 from the airport trust fund to hire the architect. A 14,000 square foot terminal costing about $420,000 has been proposed to replace the present smaller facility. Air Wisconsin has indicated it would be willing to commit itself to leasing about half the space for its operations and general offices.

Also lurking in the background is a possible attempt to get the county board to reconsider last month's decision to enter into an agreement with Allis-Chalmers for a solid waste shredder plant.

That action passed 27-9 but vocal opponents on t e board, along with Al Fischer, sales manager for an incinerator firm which was an unsuccessful bidder, have indicated they will push for reconsideration.

One of the opponents, Supv. Fred Rehfeldt, who also is an Appleton alderman, has been leading a fight in the city council to delay any potential city participation in use of the shredder plant.

In new business to come before the board, authorization will be sought to hire a consultant to help determine the space needs of the various offices in the courthouse. The consultant was requested by County Executive Alvin Woehler and somewhat reluctantly endorsed by the property, building and maintenance committee.

A broadened county retirement policy also is being submitted for consideration. Under the new policy, all county employes, except elected officials and sheriff's department personnel will be required to retire at age 65.

All protective occupational participants in the sheriff's department will be required to retire at age 60 for the year 1973 and at age 55, effective Jan. 1, 1974.

Appleton youth among 12 Air Force finalists

An Appleton youth is among 12 finalists from the 8th Congressional District in competition for appointments to the U.S. Air Force Academy, Rep. John W. Byrnes, R-Green Bay, announced.

Bruce Bain, son of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Bain, 1618 N. Racine St., is among the top dozen candidates in scores on Civil Service tests administered in October, Byrnes said.

Appleton officials grope for ways to counteract revenue sharing loss

Appleton's federal revenue sharing setback has prompted one alderman to propose reconsidering the newly adopted city budget, or at least establishing spending controls to avert a possible $700,000 year-end 1973 deficit.

Ald. Walter Kalata (2nd) made the suggestion in a resolution filed late Friday afternoon for city council consideration. Meanwhile, Finance Director Reynold Running said he has instructions from Mayor James Sutherland to prepare a memo explaining the impact of the anticipated revenue shortage, and to outline some alternative ways of dealing with it.

Appleton officials learned Thursday and Friday that the city's portion of federal sharing funds will be $700,000 or more short of the $2.1 million the city had been told to expect for this year and next.

The $700,000 represents nearly 10 per cent of the total revenue other than property taxes the budget anticipates for city purposes.

City officials say there was no advance indication that the estimates might be grossly miscalculated Sutherland said Friday it is "just incomprehensible" that the estimates had been allowed to stand for a period of weeks without some warning from federal officials.

A Wall Street Journal article Thursday reported that actual revenue sharing payments would be at least 50 per cent below estimates for 6,000 states and municipalities; 10 to 50 per cent low for another 6,100; 50 per cent or more above estimates for 7,000 government units and 10 to 50 per cent over extimates for another 10,350 units.

City Atty. David Geenen said this morning that it is too late to reconsider the city budget, adopted Nov. 27, as Kalata's resolution proposes. Reconsideration is permitted under council rules only at the same meeting or the next one following an action.

Kalata conceded that his resolution cannot be taken literally, but he said it is still possible to establish internal spending controls to prevent exceeding the funds that will be available.

He suggested "some kind of a freeze" on spending programs already authorized. One possibility, he said, is to make the council's attrition freeze committee a "budget review committee" to watch all spending, rather than confining its activities to watching the city's hiring of new or replacement personnel.

Some of the revenue sharing loss, he added, could be made up through borrowing.

The city attorney agreed that measures such as Kalata suggested could be taken legally, as long as the budget and tax rates are not changed.

Kalata also acknowledged another reason why it would be a poor time to reconsider the budget itself. Outagamie County this year for the first time is preparing Appleton's tax bills. County Treasurer Peter Berg said preparing of the personal property tax rolls, the initial stage of the process, was scheduled to begin today. All tax rolls and bills are scheduled for completion by the end of next week, or Monday Dec. 18 at the latest, Berg said Friday.

He said he talked with Running by telephone late Friday afternoon and Running confirmed that the county should begin as planned.

There seems little question that some form of emergency action will be forthcoming from the city council in the next few weeks. Kalata said he has discussed his idea with a few aldermen and they seemed to agree something must be done.

Just what steps will be taken, however, will probably be known only after considerable debate and sharp penciled work in the finance department.

Detective issues 'caveat emptor'

Persons buying candy from young door-to-door salesmen risk taking the loss if the product turns out to be spoiled, Det. Sgt. Ronald Soper of the Appleton Police Department cautioned today.

His statement came after police received a complaint from a man that he bought a 6 oz. box of candy for $1.50 from a young boy claiming to be a member of an organization selling candy in the area on Friday, only to find out that most of the candy was stale.

Soper said the department provided the man with the name of an organization licensed to sell candy in the area but a spokesman for that group told the man that none of his youthful salesmen were on the streets Friday. Soper said there is little police can do about the complaint, and that the customer appeared to be the loser.

If people are approached by a salesman and they do buy the product offered, it might be a good idea for them to get the name of the salesman, Soper added, although it might still be hard to prove that the person was working for the organization named.

A person's best course of action would be either to not buy the products, or else buy from organizations he is well acquainted with, Soper said.

DNR asks authority to issue waste permits

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has been asked to give the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources interim authority to issue waste discharge permits under the new federal water pollution control law.

The state Board of Natural Resources made that request Friday and also asked that the DNR be given wider latitude in deciding how to prosecute pollutors while procedures are worked out.

The new law authorizes the EPA, while retaining veto power, to permit state agencies to issue permits if the state's regulations meet the federal agency's standards.

Dischargers were required under the old law to provide equipment which would keep their discharge from reducing the quality of the water into which it went, while the new law is aimed at raising the quality of the effluent.

Oliver Williams, assistant administrator of the state Division of Environmental Protection, said fulfillment of the board's second request was needed to spell out the department's authority in extending deadlines for a few dischargers.

The board approved a set of regulations which are designed to force industrial dischargers to help pay the cost of monitoring air and water quality, despite a dispute over the definition of "person" in the rules.

The rules include a register of toxic and hazardous substances along with a fee schedule ranging from $5 to $10,000 which would take effect if more than a designated minimum amount were discharged. Each "person" affected would also be required to pay a $50 administrative fee.

Harold Jordahl of Madison voted against adoption of the regulations because he said the definition of "person" would allow a company with several plants to pay a single fee.

Richard Strearn of Sturgeon Bay, chairman of the board's Environmental Quality Committee, said new legislation was need to clarify the language, but waiting for this to be done before applying the rules would mean a delay of months.

Board member John Potter of Wisconsin Rapids said that, if the legislature acted, the more conservative interpretation would only be in use for one-half year at most.

Separate air and water rules had been prepared, but they were combined for the convenience of persons who would have to do the reporting.

Sister speaks at Kaukauna school meeting

KAUKAUNA — "A child wants to be talked to, not at," said Sister Lorraine Cann, member of the Diocesan Education Office, Green Bay, when addressing the Holy Cross Home-School Association recently.

"Instill love in your children. It is much easier to love when someone loves you. A child has to know he is loved and concerned. God is that to us. The most precious thing you can give your child is the relationship to Jesus Christ. We are where this treasure is really formed throughout each day. Talk to them, not at them," said the speaker.

The nun said, "Parents instill faith into their children by their actions and by talking to them about God. Our relationship grows with Christ throughout our life. We should give our children the human image of Christ and then relate His divine actions in our daily life. Christ is our friend and we should converse with Him in prayer. Just enjoying God's creation is prayer.

"Christ said, 'forgive, understand and don't judge.' This is all the why of things which is our conscience. Parents form the child's conscience by setting rules," said Sister Lorraine. After her talk she presented a parents' handbook to guide parents in dealing with children from pre-school age through sixth grade.

Past few weeks happy ones for young Jeff

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Fate has not been kind to 10-year-old Jeff Staniske but at least the past few weeks have been happy ones.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Staniske of Ashwaubenon is afflicted with a rare terminal brain disease and doctors give him only about eight more months to live.

Though he is confined to a wheel chair and has little use of his arms or hands, Mrs. Staniske said, "All he talks about is how lucky he is because of all the wonderful things that are happening to him."

Since news of the youth's ailment reached the public through the media, the Staniske home has been flooded with cards, letters and gifts, she said.

"Everytime the telephone or doorbell rings, Jeff smiles from ear to ear and asks, 'What's next?' " she said.

The youth is a Green Bay Packer fan and he was treated to a dinner with player Clarence Williams and a vist from coach Dan Devine.

"He (Devine) was just wonderful," Mrs. Staniske said. "He sat in Jeff's room with him for about 45 minutes, holding his hand and telling him jokes."

The attention has also helped the family out with its medical bills. The "Friends of Jeff Staniske Fund" at Fox Heights State bank in Green Bay reports it has collected $5,000. It hopes to raise more with a benefit dance Dec. 15.

A-C would hire 50 in Appleton

Allis-Chalmers expects solid waste shredders to be a "$5-million to $10 million business in Appleton within the next five years," Wendell Bueche, general manager of Allis-Chalmers' screening and crushing division, told the Appleton Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors Friday.

Bueche, outlining the progress his firm is making toward construction of a solid waste shredding plant for Outagamie County, said the new manufacturing phase will mean 50 to 60 new jobs at the Allis-Chalmers Appleton plant, with an addition of $500,000 to $600,000 annually in the payroll.

Bueche reported that Allis Chalmers is proceeding with the design of the plant and has sent an engineering team to Sweden to observe the plants now in successful operation there and work out the detailed plans for the Outagamie County facility. The plants have been operating successfully for three years in Sweden and were designed and built by a subsidiary of Allis-Chalmers. The Outagamie County facility is to be patterned on the Swedish design. Swedish experts have already traveled to Appleton to help expedite engineering calculations.

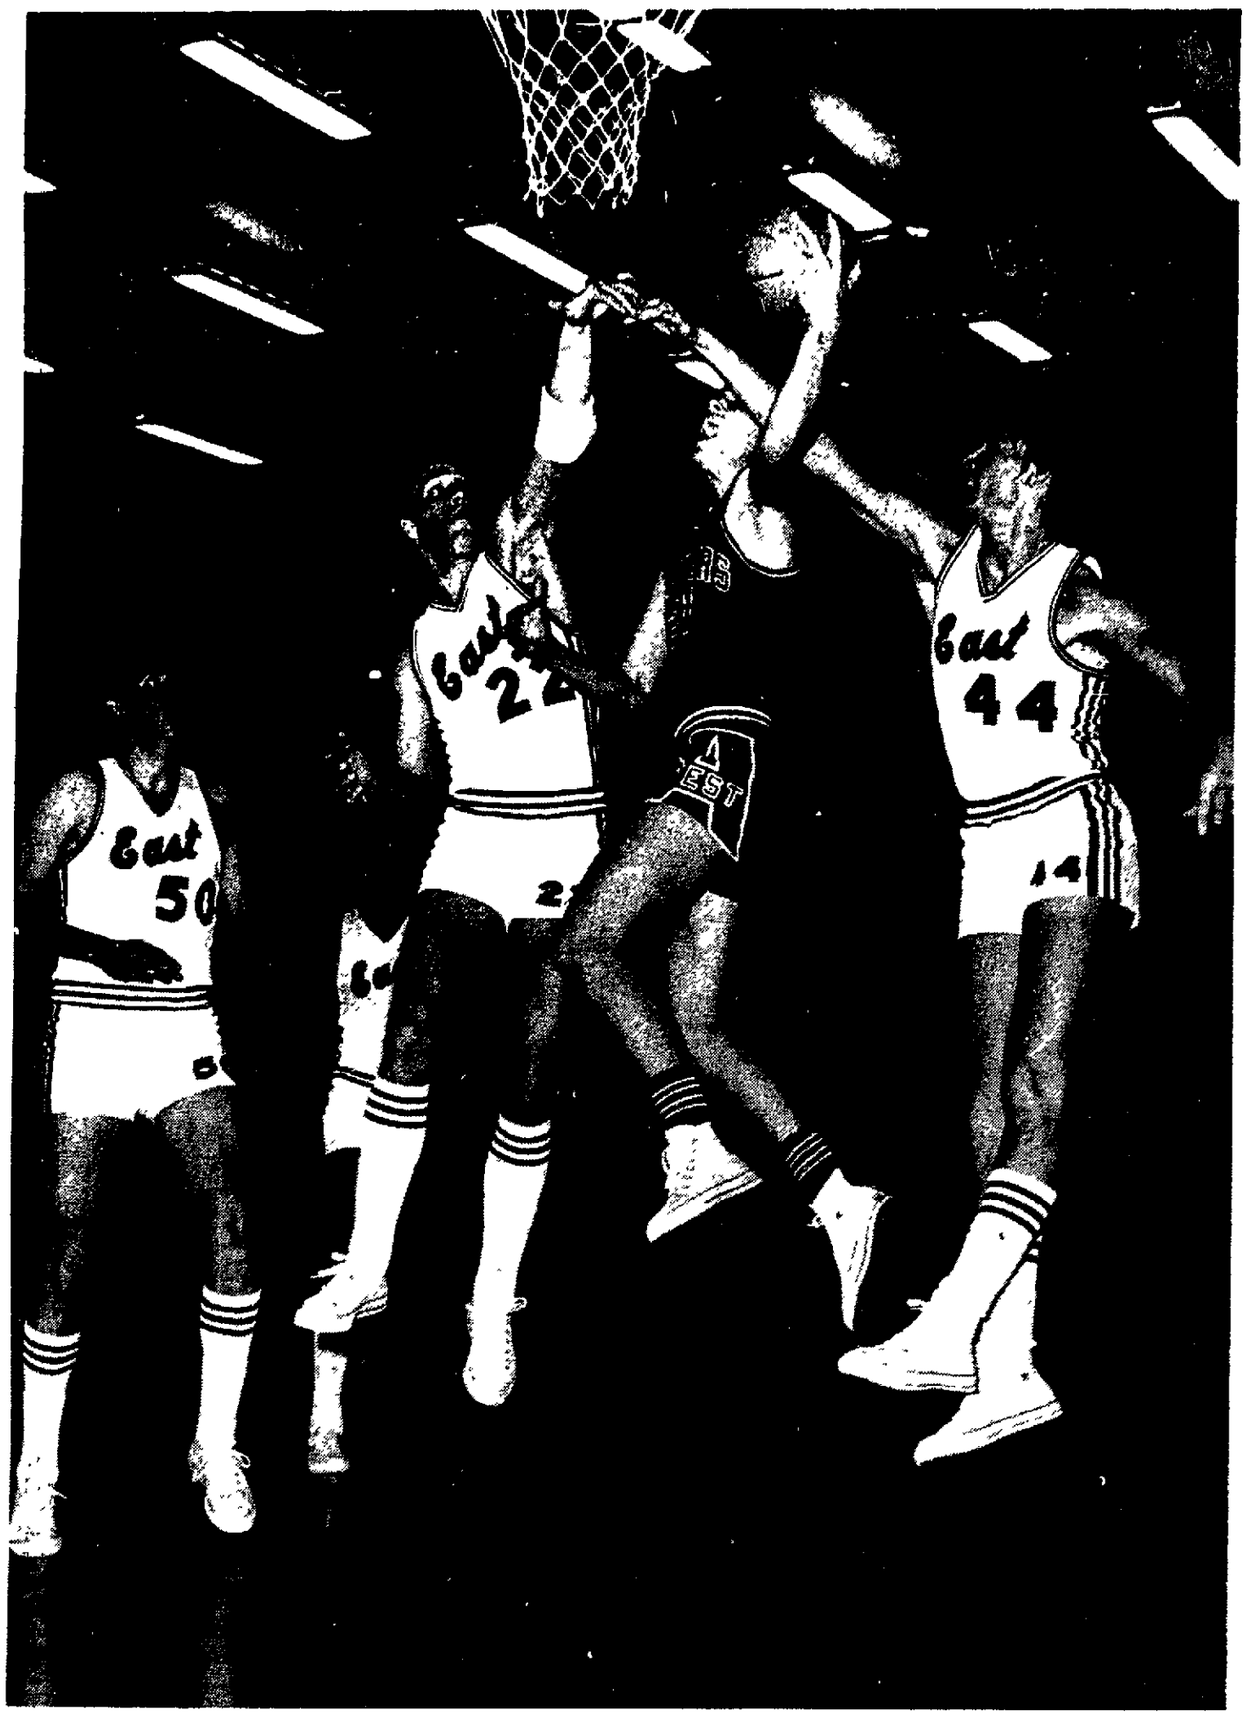

Allis-Chalmers has received from the county a letter of intent to enter into a formal contract to build a solid waste shredder facility once the company provides the county with the functional specifications. Bueche told the Chamber Board that Allis-Chalmers will be able to furnish the county with a formal bid on the facility hopefully by Jan. 9, and no later than Jan. 31. The company has discussed the specific costs of the project with local contractors and suppliers.

The Outagamie County Board, at its November meeting, authorized county officials to negotiate an agreement with Allis-Chalmers for a solid waste shredder at a cost not to exceed $700,000. Bueche told the Chamber that the county's action to establish a county-wide solid waste management system was "the most progressive step taken by any county in the state." Outagamie County is the first in Wisconsin to adopt a county-wide solid waste management system which the state legislature authorized counties to do during the last session.

Bueche said that all Allis-Chalmers waste shredders marketed in the United States will be manufactured in the Appleton plant. In looking for a location to build their first waste shredder, Allis Chalmers looked to Outagamie County because of the proximity of the Allis-Chalmers plant in Appleton.

Allis-Chalmers would use this first facility for continuing research into solid waste disposal and also for demonstration to perspective customers. Because this will be the first Allis-Chalmers shredder in the American market, the facility was offered to Outagamie County at cost, Bueche said. The amount Outagamie County will be paying for this facility is far below what the market price will be for this facility on subsequent shredders built by Allis-Chalmers.

Tangled arms

East stuns West

BY ROGER PITT
Post-Crescent staff writer

A scrambling, hard working man-for-man defense throttled any offensive aspirations Appleton West entertained Friday as Appleton East dominated more than the 57-46 final score indicates.

"It was a big game for us," the Patriots' Tom Gossens said afterward. "We couldn't afford another loss."

The victory hiked the Pats into a tie for second with Appleton West, Neenah and Kaukauna with 2-1 Fox Valley Association slates. Kimberly is the leader with a 3-0 mark.

What unfolded at Appleton East's double-tiered gymnasium was startling to the capacity crowd. Little did anyone expect such a defensive display.

Appleton West's Dick Emanuel has long been regarded a wizard of shifting defenses and control ball. He has a new challenger in Gossens who relies heavily on a strong defense.

West pressure

West pressured much of the game in the back court and this presented some problems to the tall Patriots. The Pats relied on a man-for-man which at times resembled a zone as the teamwork was outstanding.

"It was just a great defensive effort," Gossens said. "The kids played such good defense it was too bad we had those lapses late in the half and game. Our offense wasn't making any mistakes until the end. We made them take well-guarded shots and hit the boards well."

Carl Joosten connected on a 15-foot jumper to give West the lead in the opening minute and then the scoring almost went into limbo. Paul Callaway, a 6-6 sophomore, rebounded a shot in the key to tie the contest with 4:02 left in the first period

Tim Kelley tipped in a shot at the 3:20 mark and the rout was on. East led 14-6 at the end of the period as all five Patriot starters scored at least one goal.

The Patriots outscored West 12-6 in the first six minutes of the second stanza but then experienced one of the lapses Gossens regretted. In the final two minutes, West had a 8-1 scoring advantage and remained in contention, 27-20, at the intermission.

Takes control

Dan Heinritz took control after the half as he scored 13 of his game high 17 points. The Terrors struggled to only seven points in the third period as they got off only eight shots. East took a 14-point spread (41-27) into the final segment.

While the Terrors managed to chip away at the East lead in the final period, they never moved into challenging position. East twice had 18-point leads (47-29 and 51-33) in the final period.

East connected on 22 of 43 shots as it was satisfied to control the ball and took only 18 shots in the second half. The Terrors connected on 17 of a mere 40 shots. The Pats also held a 27-20 rebound edge

While the high-scoring Kelley managed 12 points, it was his coverage of the Terrors top threat, Joosten, which was stellar. Joosten only scored four points in the second half to match Kelley's 12 for the contest. Joosten cleared seven rebounds and Kelley six.

Callaway, who scored 11 points, was the rebound leader with 11 retrieves. Heinritz picked off five. Little Craig Martin — just 5-8 — tallied 12 points for the winners.

West committed 21 turnovers and East 18 as both pressure defenses took their toll.

Dan plays down weather aspect

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers, trying to prove they're back, and the Minnesota Vikings, out to show they aren't over the hill, clash Sunday at Metropolitan Stadium in a National Football League game in which the weather could be a big factor.

Forecasts for the 1 p.m. (CST) kickoff call for a high temperature of five degrees below zero. Snow is supposed to begin falling tonight and continue into Sunday.

The Packers, a Central Division also-ran since their Super Bowl years after the 1966 and 1967 seasons, need only a victory against the Vikings to advance into the National Conference playoffs.

The Vikings, who have been criticized as being too old, can wrap up their fifth straight Central title with victories against the Packers and the San Francisco 49ers next Saturday.

Green Bay is 8-4, Minnesota 7-5.

Both teams have fought off icy, snowy weather this week to get ready for the game, and both coaches play down the weather aspect.

"The club has been practicing very well all week and everyone is adapting to the cold very well," said Green Bay Coach Dan Devine.

Coach Bud Grant has had his Vikings practicing indoors and outside at University of Minnesota facilities while the Metropolitan Stadium playing field remains covered by insulated padding.

"The day of the game, the adrenalin is flowing and there's really no problem in playing— that's the easy part," said Grant. "The week of preparation is the difficult thing."

The Vikings have been preparing to stop Green Bay's running back combination of John Brockington and MacArthur Lane. Brockington, with 908 yards, is trying to become the first player in NFL history to rush for 1,000 yards in his first two seasons. Lane adds 638 yards.The Vikings have built their offense around Fran Tarkenton, who has passed for 2,389 yards and 16 touchdowns. While John Gilliam has been the primary receiver with 42 catches for 930 yards and six touchdowns, Tarkenton likes to go with his stable of running backs headed by Oscar Reed, the leading rusher with 603 yards and No. 2 receiver with 28 catches for 202 yards.

The two defenses played at their best last week. The Vikings held Chicago to 91 net yards—only two pass completions—in a 23-10 victory. Detroit fell to the Packers 33-7, losing the ball six times on turnovers and getting only 26 yards in the first half.

Rockets edge Menasha

BY GEORGE MANCOSKY

NEENAH — "It was a heck of a ball game."

These identical words were used by coaches Ron Einerson of Neenah and Menasha's Clem Massey to describe the contest after the Rockets edged the Bluejays, 70-68, in a throwback to many of their all-time classics here Friday night.

The Menashans, seeking their first victory over their ancient rivals since the 1965-66 season, trailed, 42-29, at halftime and were down by 17 points early in the third segment, only to battle back to gain a 68-65 lead with 2:16 left to play.

At that juncture, the Bluejays' Dave Kolasinski missed his first shot on a bonus situation which could have given them a afer 5-point bulge and the Rockets rebounded.

A Neenah shot was missed but Steve Suechting put in the rebound with 1:58 left for a 1-point difference.

At the 55-second mark, Paul Wisnefski, who was outstanding for the Menashans, fouled out, and Rod Kuchenbecker tied the score with his first free throw but missed the bonus Neenah, however, rebounded, and Roger Johnson put up the go-ahead and what turned out to be the deciding goal.

Missed shot

With 10 seconds remaining, Menasha's Bob Pomerenka attempted a shot but it missed. The ball went off a Bluejay player out of bounds and the Rockets held tight as the final seconds ticket off.

First half action found Neenah owning a 33-23 lead only to have the Jays come within four points with 2:12 left in the second period.

Einerson's forces then connected on the final nine points of the half to take a 42-29 advantage at the intermission. They built up their spread to 17 with six of the first eight markers of the third segment.

With the count 50-34, Menasha came back with a string of seven in a row to shave the spread in half and with the score 57-47, the visitors picked up the final two baskets of the quarter to trail by six going into what turned out to be a furious final frame.

Menasha came up with the initial five points to trim the margin to one and after the Rockets went back ahead, 60-57. Their guests struck for seven in a row to capture a 64-61 lead with 3:33 left in the game.

Ben Luebke, who sat out the previous three games because of an injury, then hit a pair of quick baskets to put the hosts ahead by a point but two long jump shots by Pomerenka at the 2:54 and 2:16 marks moved Menasha ahead by three. It ended the Jays' scoring as Neenah came up with the game's final five tallies

"We're going to be a good ball club," Massey said, noting that the Jays didn't throw the ball away as much in the second half and that their fast break was working better. Inability to get that 5 point lead on the free throw bonus situation late in the game hurt, the Bluejay mentor added.

Einerson lauded the play of Luebke, of whom he said gave the Rockets the lift they needed. The Rocket mentor said that with a 13-point halftime lead, they thought they could put the game away in the third period but fouls hurt them.

"We came down and let fly and missed and they came down and let fly and the ball went through," Einerson said of second half action. "The game was physical as it usually is when these teams get together," the Neenah coach said.

Neenah scoring honors went to Tom Spice with 16 points. Luebke added 15 and Brett Huus netted 11

Wisnefski, who played in four trouble in the second half, paced the Jays with 20. Pomerenka put in 18 and Rory Bennett had 14.

Free throws play a key part in the game with the Rockets making 18 of 25, including 16 of 18 in the first half The Jays only managed 14 of 30, after hitting seven of 10 in the initial two frames.

Squires' defense halts Hawks

BY JOHN L. PAUSTIAN
Post Crescent Sports Editor

De Pere Pennings' defensively-imposing Squires led all the way in handing Appleton Xavier a 54-43 basketball loss here Friday night

Pennings' 2-3 zone defense, anchored by 6-foot-10 Todd Danen, virtually sealed off the free throw area. Besides blocking a half-dozen or more shots, Danen intimidated the Hawks into taking hurried or off-balance flings at the basket Despite a fourth-period improvement (7-for-17) the Hawks finished at only 32 1 per cent (18 of 56) in field goal accuracy.

Pennings also threw in a pesky full court press for good measure, and this caused Xaiver to cough up the ball a number of times without getting off a shot.

Offensively, the Squires worked deliberately against Xavier's zone (first half) and man-to-man (second half) and attempted only 45 shots Nineteen of these found the mark, for a .422 pace

A disappointed Xavier coach, Gus Laemmrich, who saw his team (2-2) drop two games behind defending champion and co-leading Pennings (4-0), felt the Hawks were lackadaisical on both offense and defense. "We lacked the confidence needed to dominate," said Laemmrich. The second-year coach wouldn't attribute the defeat to the flu which hit much of the squad during the week and reduced practice time. "Sickness is an easy way out . . . We simply lacked a champions' desire," Laemmrich lamented.

Laemmrich managed to retain a measure of confidence in regard to the FVCC title chase "The eventual champion will lose three games," he said.

Pennings took the early initiative — on Paul Deacon's corner shot and Danen's tip-in — and never relinquished it. Xavier didn't break the ice until Joe Schneider netted a rebound with the game 3 minutes, 54 seconds old. Despite hitting on but two of 13 field attempts in the first quarter, Xavier trailed by only five points (10-5) The Hawks stayed close for the first four minutes of the second period, then the Squires broke loose for a 10-point (26-16) halftime lead

Xavier's Jeff Hayes connected for 15 feet out at the start of the third period — but it was to be the last time the Hawks got their deficit below double figures Pennings countered with nine straight points (four by Danen, three by Dick Hendricks and two by Phil Arant) to take a 35-18 lead — the game's fattest margin. In this decisive 3½-minute segment, the Hawks committed five turnovers. However, Joe Fitzgerald paced the hosts back to within 12 (37-25) at quarter's end.)

Schneider, who had been blanked from the field for the first 13 minutes of the second half, pumped in three baskets and eight straight total points as the Hawks made a final effort to pull off a miracle. But the poised Squires had the clock on their side and weren't about to crack

Danen led all scorers, with 18 points and was the dominant rebounder He marred an impressive performance with an unsportsmanlike gesture toward the Xavier stands when he left the game in the closing seconds Arant and Paul Gigot each added 10 points For the Hawks, Schneider was tops with 17 points Hayes collected 10 points and was a highly effective rebounder

Hortonville rally tops Berlin

BERLIN — Hortonville High School pulled off a come-from-behind 62-59 win over Berlin in East Central Conference competition Friday evening behind the 30-point performance of Rob Reader.

Berlin had almost complete control of the game until the fourth segment, when Hortonville outscored the hosts 21-9 in pulling off the win, its third against one loss. Berlin is still winless, (0-4).

Berlin opened up the contest by outscoring the winners 19-16 in the initial segment and went on to increase the lead to 38-29 by halftime The Hortonville deficit remained at nine going into the fourth quarter, as at the end of the third period the scoreboard read, 50-41

Besides Reader's 30 points, Randy Schwartz tallied 12 for the winners

Running attack aids Bucks past Warriors

BY MIKE O'BRIEN
ASSOCIATED PRESS SPORTS WRITER

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Milwaukee Bucks decided to haul their running game out of storage Friday night, and the Golden State Warriors obliged by not bringing along Clyde Lee.

With the 6-foot-10 Lee, who averaged 16.7 rebounds a game against Milwaukee last season, out with a foot injury, the Bucks used backward control to fuel one of their most impressive fast breaks in weeks.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 19 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, igniting several breaks with long outlet passes as the Bucks raced to a 124-91 victory. It kept them half a game ahead of second place Chicago in the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division.

Coach Larry Costello, who counted 42 points produced by fast breaks, said he had told his Bucks after defeats in Los Angeles and Seattle this week they were going to run—or else.

"I told the players if they're not running, I'm just going to assume they're tired and take them out," Costello said.

"If we don't run, sometimes we have trouble even getting the ball upcourt," he said. "We have to run because we don't have that many one on one players. It was probably our best running since an exhibition game in Denver"

Milwaukee finished with only a 59-51 advantage in rebounds, but the spread was greater until reserves took over for both sides early in the fourth quarter

The layups produced by the breaks fattened the Bucks' shooting percentage to .524 on 54 field goals in 103 attempts. Golden State got off three more shots but hit only 37 for 34.9 per cent.

"Everybody was hitting the boards for us tonight, but you can't take away 17 rebounds a game and expect them to be as good," said Bucks' forward Curtis Perry, who sank seven of nine shots and snared nine rebounds.

"And with Lee out, Rick Barry had to go hard. He got tired out there," Perry said.

Barry totaled 26 points, 14 in the first period which ended with the Warriors down by only eight points. But the Warriors sank just two field goals in the first 5:21 of the second period as the Bucks stretched out a 4733 lead

They ran it to 65-42 at halftime, then took a 30-point lead by outscoring Golden State 11-4 at the start of the third period.

Lourdes turns back FVL, 63-55

BY DAVE VOLKMAN

OSHKOSH — Oshkosh Lourdes used a balanced attack in downing Fox Valley Lutheran, 63,55, in a Fox Valley Christian Conference basketball game here Friday night

The loss was the Foxes' third in four conference games while the Knights evened their record at 2-2

The game started out to be a close battle, but with 1 18 left in the opening period, Lourdes jumped to a 9-point bulge on a bucket by 5-9 sophomore, Pat McKenzie, making the score 19-10

By the end of the quarter, FVL closed the margin to six, at 21-15

In the second quarter, the Knights rolled again, as Dave Hirte hit on a 3-point play to give the hosts a 24-15 lead with only seconds elapsed in the period

With 6 28 remaining in the quarter, the Foxes' Jeff Young fouled Mike Bartow, who dropped in two of his 17 points to give Lourdes a 12-point (28-16) lead

The scrappy Foxes quickly moved back to within three, at 29-26 as Tom Hanke meshed two perfectly assisted layups, cutting the Knights' lead to 29-26

The two teams traded baskets for the remainder of the period, with Lourdes taking a 35-30 advantage into the locker room at half time

The third stanza see sawed back and forth, as Lourdes would jump to 7, 8 and 5-point deficits The hosts outscored FVL by two in the quarter, taking a 47-40 advantage into the final eight minutes of play

The fourth quarter went much the same as the Foxes could get no closer than six or seven points

With 1 27 remaining, the Foxes applied a full court press, and John Schultz cut the lead to four, 59-55, with a bucket at the 1 00 mark

Although the press did force Knights' turnovers, the Foxes could not capitalize on them Four free throws by John Kita closed out the scoring at 63 55

Besides Bartow, the winners were paced by Jim Gaerwald with 16 points and Kita with 12

FVL was led by Young with 18 markers, and Schultz and Hanke with 13 and 12, respectively

Papermakers remain unbeaten in league

OSHKOSH — A pressing Kimberly team had to overcome Oshkosh North's best performance of the season Friday to retain its lead in the Fox Valley Association

The Papermakers outscored the host team, 69-51

Kimberly (3-0) took sole possession of the FVA lead as co-leader Appleton West lost to Appleton East

Chuck Ruys, a 6-5 junior, was a tower for Kimberly as he pushed in 16 points and hauled down 14 rebounds

The winners opened a 28-15 lead at one juncture in the first half but the Spartans had a 10-4 scoring edge in the last three minutes to remain in contention at 32-25 at the intermission

Kimberly blitzed North in the early moments of the second half as their pressure defense forced numerous turnovers and the Papermakers tallied the first 10 points

Lee Reider contributed 11 points to the winning total Greg Boese connected for 15 and Nels Naslund 14 for Oshkosh

W-B stays undefeated by rapping Little Chute

BY BERNIE PETERSON
Post Crescent Staff Writer

LITTLE CHUTE — Capitalizing on the frigid shooting of host Little Chute, Wittenberg-Birnamwood scored a crushing 56-32 Central Wisconsin Conference basketball victory here Friday

The win advanced the Chargers' season mark to 5-0, including 3-0 in league play, while the Mustangs fell to 2 3 overall, with 2-2 in the CWC

Pivotman Mike Gilbertson popped in five quick points to help stake W-B to a 7-0 lead before Phil Janssen's goal got Little Chute on the board at 4 43 of the first period

Working from a 13-6 lead at the close of the quarter, the Chargers used a balanced second-period attack to open a 29-11 halftime bulge, as Little Chute converted on just five of 31 first half fielders

Things hardly improved in the second half for the frostbitten Mustang shooters, as they were outscored 27-21 and made only eight of 35 shots in the second half

The error-infested contest saw the two units combine for 45 turnovers (23 by the winners), including 16 in the third quarter

Wittenberg-Birnamwood hardly sparkled in its shooting (22 of 67 for 328) but was able to muscle its way inside for better percentage shots, as Gilbertson and Joey Pavlichek outfought the smaller Mustangs

Gilbertson who netted 12 points in the first half took game honors with 16, while Pavlichek followed with 14

Little Chute's Tim Fitzpatrick, who entered the game with a 17 8 scoring average, was held to three goals in 16 attempts and eight points, which tied Rick Vanderwyst for team honors Overall, the losers coaxed in 13 of 66 field goal attempts for a weak 197

Denmark tops Wrightstown

WRIGHTSTOWN — A balanced Wrightstown attack wasn't enough to top a stubborn Denmark team here Friday night as the Vikings downed the Tigers, 72-68 in Olympian Conference action

Denmark tallied 12 markers to the losers 11 in the initial period and went on to score 27 in the second to the Tigers' 25 That gave the visitors a 39-36 lead at halftime

In the fourth period, a Wrightstown rally fell short

Wrightstown's John Hanaway and Wayne Birck scored 15 each and Kurt Clancy and Aerts tallied 14 apiece

Shiocton edges Marion quint

MARION — A battle of the winless turned out to be a real barnburner Friday evening as Shiocton tallied a 55-54 win over Marion in a Central Wisconsin Conference contest

In the wanning minutes of the game, Shiocton's Joe Banda scored three consecutive baskets to give the visitors a 55 53 lead Marion grabbed the ball and Pete Kristof raced down court and with 21 remaining supposedly canned a jumper to tie things up but the bucket was nullified on a traveling violation

Kristof led all scorers with 30 points and Mark Meyer added 10 for Marion's effort

For the winners, Mike Bricco counted 20 Banda 12 and Steve Allen 10

Shiocton now owns a 1 3 record while Marion stands at 0-4

Wautoma '5' beats Manawa

MANAWA — With three starters fouling out in the third period, a 6-point Manawa lead soon dwindled to nothing, and Wautoma continued to pour it on and win 64-54, Friday night

The Wolves, now 2-1 in the Central Wisconsin Conference, had taken a 3 point (18-15) first-quarter lead and had increased that bulge to 37-31 at the half Fouls, however, curtailed Manawa's offense in the third stanza and Wautoma 1 2 tied the count, at 47, going into the final segment

Wautoma's balanced attack placed three players in double figures Rick Hasselquist led the way with 21 points followed by Brian Thaldorf and Brent Schultz's 13

Pat Loughrin fueled the Wolves' attack with 17 markers Tim Drath added 12 and Dennis Thomack 10

Ghosts post 65-56 win over Indians

BY DAN VANDERPAS
Post Crescent staff writer

KAUKAUNA — Scott Lunda, a 6-0 junior, fired in eight consecutive free throws in the last quarter and scored a total of 24 points, while Reed Giordana meshed 23, to propel Kaukauna to a 65-56 Fox Valley Association triumph over Oshkosh West here Friday night

The Ghosts are now 2-1 in FVA play, while the Indians slipped to 1-2

"That team (Oshkosh West) is for real," KHS Coach Ken VanderVelden said after the game "They're real scrappy At times, I thought we might be able to pull away, but they battled right back"

The quints fought a touch-and-go battle during the first juncture, but with the help of Todd Luedtke's tip-in at the 06 clocking, Kaukauna grabbed a 12-11 lead going into stanza II

In the second session, however, Giordana, the FVA's scoring leader with a 23 5-point per game average going in, parted the twines with four baskets and a gift toss, enabling KHS to take a 33 22 advantage into the dressing room

The Indians battled back in the third session to slice the Ghosts' margin to four points With 4 15 left to go in the canto, Larry Carpenter, who paced all point producers with 26 markers hooped a 20-footer from the corner to trim the KHS lead to 37-33

During the next minute, Bill Dehn the Indians' 6-6 sophomore center missed four straight free throws Kaukauna then gained more breathing room as Lunda banked a short jumper and Giordana swished a 10-footer to increase the lead to eight points (41-33)

Bruce Dittmer gave Oshkosh West the momentum again with only 2 40 remaining in the contest by splitting the cords with a short jump shot to reduce Kaukauna's lead to 56-50 But Lunda rattled the board with a pair of charity stripers and rifled in a layup to up the advantage to 60-50 Lunda committed his fifth foul at that point, but it was too late for OW to bounce back

Clutch tosses

"I was happy we got those clutch free throws," VanderVelden quipped "In previous games, we weren't too hot from the line

"Lunda really did a job tonight," the KHS tactician went on "And Giordana was excellent as usual He had some nice assists Even though they beat us on the boards slightly, I was satisfied with the rebounding of Luedtke He really battled"

Unofficially, the Ghosts popped in 27 field goals in 65 tries for 41 5 per cent, while the Indians netted 21 of 61 for 34 4 per cent

Other players crossing the double figures threshold were Dehn (13) and Luedtke (12)

Heuvelmans scores 25 as Cadets edge Zephyr '5'

BY TOM MANCOSKY

MENASHA — Kevin Heuvelmans sank two free throws with 48 seconds left and Chuck Kabat put in two insurance tosses with 12 remaining as Green Bay Premontre edged upset minded St Mary Central, 56-53, here Friday night

The victory upped the Cadets' conference record to 3 1 and left the Zephyrs 1-3 in the league and 2 4 overall

Heuvelmans, who scored 25 points on the night, was sent to the charity line after being fouled by the Zephyrs' Dave Michalkiewicz with the Zephyrs holding a 53-52 lead His two successes put the Cadets ahead by one

It appeared that the Zephyrs were up again with 33 seconds left when Chris Fahrbach made a shot from close range but he was called for a 3-second violation Play continued on for several seconds as players couldn't hear the officials' whistle because of crowd noise Kabat then made the two final free throws after Michalkiewicz picked up his fifth foul

The Cadets, picked to finish first in the Fox Valley Christian Conference, were unable to build up a lead greater than eight points

Premontre led, 38-32, with 5 50 left in the third frame only to see it wither to 45-44 the close of the quarter

With the visitors owning a 47-44 lead in the final frame, St Mary came back to take a 50 47 lead with six straight points on two baskets and a free throw by Michalkiewicz and a gifter by Bill Mauthe

At the 4 39 mark, Bob Meyers fouled Rick Peot who made the first shot of the bonus but didn't convert on the second cutting the spread to 50-48 Mark Hogan then stole the ball and went in for a layup to tie the count at 50 apiece

After a 2½ minute cold spell by both teams Herb Hubert put the Zephyrs in front 52-50 Heuvelmans came back to tie the score at 52 with 1 30 left

Michalkiewicz was fouled by Kabat and converted on one free throw giving the Menashans a 1-point edge with 51 seconds to play, setting the stage for the Cadets' final surge

Premontre, which led 16-11 at the quarter and 32-28 at halftime was led by Heuvelmans' 25 points on 10 baskets and five free throws No one else made more than six

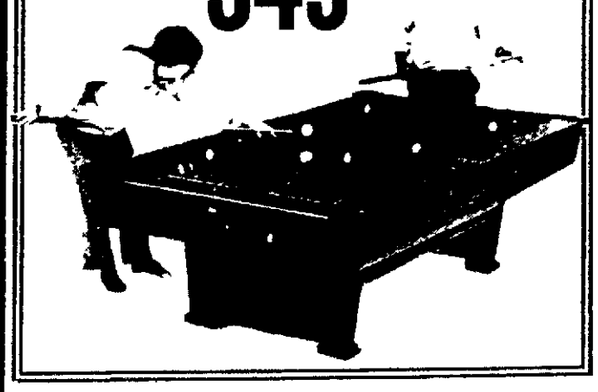

Michalkiewicz paced the Zephyrs with 14 markers Dick Kobinsky and Hubert netted eight apiece

In the statistical department Premontre had a 44 to 34 edge in rebounds and made 16 turnovers to the Zephyrs' 11

Central pins 46-37 setback on St. John

BY JIM HARP
Post-Crescent staff writer

LITTLE CHUTE — Using ball control tactics highly reminiscent of the Marty Crowe era, Marinette Central punctured the success bubble of the Little Chute St. John basketball team by handing the Dutchmen a 46-37 defeat here Friday night.

The loss, along with DePere Abbot Pennings' victory over Appleton Xavier, knocked St. John out of a share of the Fox Valley Christian Conference lead with their first setback in four games.

The Cavaliers set the tone for the contest right from the outset as they passed the ball around, did not take a shot at the basket for the first three minutes, failed to score a point for the first six minutes and did not have a field goal until only 1:35 remained in the opening period.

When the Dutchmen did get their hands on the ball they found difficulty in putting it through the hoop as they managed just four of 11 shots in the first quarter and shot a meager 32 per cent for the game on 15 of 46. In contrast, Marinette dropped in 46 per cent of its field goal tries with 16 out of 35.

For coach Lyle Bowers of the Chuters, the loss was a bitter pill to swallow. "We play five good games in a row and then something like this," the young St. John mentor said disappointedly. "We boarded well with teams a lot taller than ourselves, but in this game we couldn't buy a rebound. They forced us to shoot from the outside and although we weren't taking the shots like we should have we weren't hitting either. What it boils down to is that tonight I think they wanted it a little more than we did."

St. John held a 8-6 lead after the first period and also was out in front 17-16 at halftime. The contest was deadlocked five different times in the second period as the lead see-sawed back and forth.

Apparently pepped up at halftime, the Dutchmen came out in the third stanza and promptly dropped in their first four shots from the floor and zoomed to a 28-18 lead as they scored 11 points while limiting the Cavaliers to a pair of free throws.

With two minutes left in the third quarter, things turned in Marinette's favor as the Cavaliers hit the last 10 points of the period to knot the score at 28-all going into the final eight minutes.

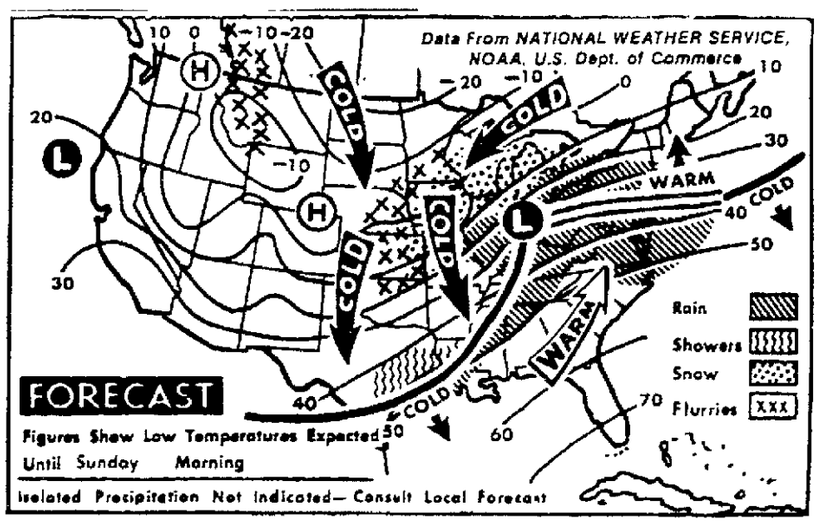

At the mid-point of the fourth quarter St. John still held a 34-33 lead, but Marinette hit three straight buckets and used up 2½ minutes in the process. The Chuters went completely cold in the last four minutes, failing to score from the field and having to settle for just three charity tosses.

"I thought our defense did a good job," coach Bowers said after the game "but when they slow it down like that and you don't hit the shots you do get, things get pretty tough."

Pat Gardon of the Cavaliers took game scoring honors with 15 points on four buckets and seven free throws. Jim Bouche and Pete GArdon added 10 each for the victors.

For St. John, the scoring was divided between eight players and Dave Van Lieshout was high with 10, eight of which he scored in the first half.

Police & fire beat

A 10-year-old Appleton girl was reported in fair condition in the intensive care unit of St. Elizabeth Hospital today, where she is being treated for multiple injuries received when she was struck by a car driven by Chester W. Adams, 61, 2353 W. Prospect Ave., at the intersection of Prospect Avenue and Pine Street about 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Connie M. Kositzke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Kositzke, 1344 W. Pine St., suffered a fractured collar bone and thigh, facial contusions and a skull fracture, when she was struck by the car, traveling north on Prospect Avenue.

Police said the girl was one of four children crossing the street at the intersection, but none of the others were injured.

Two Menasha women received facial bruises in a two-car accident at the intersection of Badger Avenue and Mason Street about 8:15 p.m. Friday.

The driver of one car, Roxanna L. Knorr, 28, 104 Appleton St., Menasha, and her passenger, Connie A. Collins, 656 Valley Road, Menasha, were injured when their car collided with a car driven by Clifford A. Ebben, 20, 1609 S. Douglas St., Appleton.

Police said the Knorr car was traveling in a southeast direction on Badger Avenue when it moved into the path of the Ebben vehicle, proceeding north on Mason Street.

Two Appleton men suffered minor injuries in a two-car accident at the intersection of College Avenue and Lawe Street about 1:30 a.m. today.

One driver, Ralph A. Hafeman, 22, 424 S. Arlington St., complained of a sore neck, while the other driver, Dennis R. Cook, 28, 2301 S. Peter St., received a lip laceration.

Police said the Hafeman car was traveling east on College Avenue when it was struck from the rear by the Cook vehicle.

Courts

Gary Milbach, 18, 1625 N. Ullman St., was placed on the Volunteers in Probation program for one year when he appeared Friday before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Milbach was found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a runaway 15-year-old Brillion girl by sheltering her at his residence between Nov. 10 and Nov. 13.

A Jan. 31 trial was scheduled Friday for Robert L. Laux 22, 303 N. Rankin St., who pleaded not guilty to one count of marijuana possession when he appeared before Judge Nick F. Schaefer in Outagamie County Court Branch 2.

Laux was stopped by Appleton police concerning a faulty car headlight the evening of Nov. 22 in the 2300 block of E. John Street, and was arrested after the officer detected marijuana smoke coming from inside the car. A small amount of the substance was reportedly found.

Before setting the trial date, Schaefer denied a defense motion to dismiss the case.

Oconto beats Truckers

OCONTO — Oconto High School put the stops to Clintonville's offense in the second quarter (holding it to nine points) and went on to beat CHS 71-58 in Bay Conference action Friday night.

Oconto's Roger Jorgensen was the man of the hour piling up 25 points and hauling in 29 rebounds before the night was over.

Survivors include one daughter, Mrs. Percy (Geraldine) Blount, Jr.; two sons, John L. and Ronald D., all of Appleton; one brother, Edward E. Zapp, Massilon, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Victor (Genevieve) De Decker, Appleton; and 10 grandchildren. Mrs. Weber was preceded in death by her husband, John A. Weber; a brother, Willard F. Zapp and a sister, Mrs. Albert (Loretta) Giesen. Funeral services will be held Monday at 10:30 a.m. at St. Pius Catholic Church with Rev. Charles R. Brooks officiating. Interment will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery. Friends may call at the Wichmann Funeral Home from 3 until 9 p.m. on Sunday and after 8 a.m. on Monday. There will be a prayer service Sunday at 8 p.m.

LOOKING FOR THE FINEST GIFT POSSIBLE FOR YOUR HARD-OF-HEARING LOVED ONE?
SANTA SAYS....
This Christmas Give Better Hearing to Someone You Love!
Will someone in your family be left out of the family fun at Christmas because he or she can "hear but not understand?"
A hearing aid can give the joy of hearing not only at Christmas, but for years to come. Why not arrange a family group gift for that person who does not hear well?
No financial risk is involved. Haviland's will fit the proper hearing aid per our usual and customary basis: "You don't pay the bill until completely satisfied." Simply return it if not.
Call now for details.

Ann Landers

He's married to work; she roams

Dear Ann Landers You have printed several letters from married men and women who have been "dating" on the side. May I add to the discussion a viewpoint of a single male who is seeing a married woman?

I have dated many married women — secretly, of course In every case the woman was financially secure, had children and remained married for those two reasons — in that order These women all described their marriages as tolerable but unsatisfactory. The major complaint no communication. Example "He is married to his business (or profession). I feel left out. I need someone to talk to — someone to make me feel alive Someone who will look into my eyes and listen to me I need to know that I am important to a man.

The married woman I am seeing is beautiful, intelligent and exciting. I'd give anything in the world if she'd marry me but she won't leave her husband. He's a lucky son-of-a-gun, getting better than he deserves But I'm — Not Giving Up

Dear Not: Perhaps it's just as well that she doesn't divorce her husband and marry you because in a few years you'd be the husband — and husbands look different than lovers. Also she'd be your wife, and wives look different than mistresses. Are you listening, swingers?

Dear Ann Landers Is it all right for a husband to ask the person who wants to speak to his wife, "Who is this?" Is it O.K. to then ask, "What do you want to talk to her about?" Do you consider this an invasion of privacy or protecting your marriage? — Much Ado over Plenty

Dear Much: A person with A-1 telephone manners doesn't wait to be asked. He identifies himself immediately. Example: "Is Mrs. Holldanish in? Harvey Klutzville is calling." If the caller doesn't identify himself, it is O.K. to ask, but it should be done tactfully. Example: "May I tell Mrs. Holldanish who is calling?"

It is never good manners to ask a person who is calling to speak to someone else, "What do you want?" This is not only an invasion of privacy but an insult, since it suggests suspicion. Screening or monitoring phone calls is no way to protect a marriage. In fact, it's a good way to destroy it.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from "Her Husband" was from my husband! Every word he wrote is true. He never said so much as one word to me about the meaningless affairs he caught me in, and I appreciated his patience and forebearance more than I can say. One of the ways I showed my gratitude was by being good to his mother

That great letter my husband wrote to you appeared last week and it really did both of us a lot of good But this morning the roof caved in It seems my ex-boss's wife just caught up with the stale story about my affair with her husband The jackass must have had one drink too many and confessed to his wife. My husband told me about her phone call with a very sad look on his face

Since you printed his letter to me will you please print my letter, and let him know I promise never to get involved with another man again as long as I live? Thanks, Ann You're one in a million. — His Wife

Dear Wife: I'd say your husband is one in a million, not me. And now for heaven's sake behave yourself, woman.

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Brittle bones often cause falls in aged

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Many elderly people fall and break a hip. From left-handed information, "they say" sometimes the hip breaks and they fall. Would you like to comment? — Mrs. J.F.M.

That's one of the "they say" stories that happens to be true.

Of course a good many broken hips are the result of a fall, but in a considerable number of other cases a broken hip causes the fall, instead of the fall causing the broken hip.

Time after time in such cases, the patient says he (or she) doesn't know why he fell. He didn't slip, didn't stumble He just fell down and that was it.

The reason is that, as we grow older, our bones tend to become brittle and lose density. The hips bear a substantial part of our weight, and when enough strength is lost in the bone, it can crack as the result of a slight minor movement — or even crack with no added pressure at all.

How to avoid this? Well, our bones are made up of what we call a "matrix," or sort of honeycomb-like structure. The spaces are filled substantially with calcium which gives the bones their strength and density.

Day by day, cell by cell, the bones give up this calcium and replace it with fresh calcium atoms. But in some cases the calcium is lost faster than it is replaced. The bones weaken The loss of density shows on X ray, the rays passing more readily through the bones.

Some brittleness is to be expected as we age, but in other cases a disease, osteoporosis, is at work. The research people have found out some things, although not as much as they want and need to learn, about the disease. The exact cause has not yet been determined, although some of the factors are known

Lack of protein, lack of calcium, hormone changes and lack of exercise are involved.

Osteoporosis does not develop quickly, and it cannot be overcome quickly, but making sure that the diet contains adequate protein and adequate calcium is the first step in treatment.

Since women are more likely to develop osteoporosis in the years after menopause, it is assumed that menopausal changes in the hormone levels have something to do with it. Therefore administration of hormones is another part of treatment.

Finally, bones gain strength with use, lose it with insufficient exercise. In that sense, bones are like muscles. If you don't use them, they become weaker.

So far as medicine goes for osteoporosis, little has been discovered other than hormones. However, some physicians believe small doses of fluoride may help the hardness.

The ways to prevent osteoporosis are much the same as the treatment to overcome it: Diet that contains plenty of protein (meat, fish, fowl, cheese, eggs, mainly) and plenty of calcium (milk and dairy products are an outstanding source).

And exercise. That doesn't mean that the elderly person with osteoporosis should plunge into strenuous exercise. It does mean staying active. Do more walking and less sitting, and it helps the bones retain strength.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If one did not rinse dishes after washing them with a liquid detergent, would eating from these dishes be harmful to one's health, especially the blood? — C.S.

No. Most of the detergent would drain off and what remains is not harmful.

Note to C.E.: No, I don't think there is any cream or secret remedy which can be rubbed on the breasts to make them larger.

By colitis is meant a variety of intestinal ailments from very serious to merely uncomfortable. For a better understanding of its causes and treatment, write to Dr. Thosteson in care of The Post-Crescent for his booklet, "Colitis and Kindred Complaints," enclosing 25 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed (use Zip code) envelope to cover cost of printing and handling.

Alliance hits policies of council on justice

NEENAH — If the Wisconsin Council on Criminal Justice passes its $11.5 million budget Monday, it'll be over the strong objections of the Alliance of Cities.

The lack of local input into the budget — which is financed through federal funds — and the surprise release of the 342-page document a week ago has irked the alliance and members were urged to appear in person Monday when the council is scheduled to act on the budget.

It was Milwaukee who brought the issue to the alliance meeting Friday. George Wittow, fiscal liaison director, and William Carey, of his department, explained that the federal law, establishing the funding, is specific in calling for local input into the annual program.

Both charged that Walter Kelly, council director, was "forcing his own philosophies on the local municipalities. We feel that the local units are better able to determine their needs," Carey pointed out.

He also pointed to $1.6 million in the budget being earmarked for defender services while only $256,000 was being spent on prosecution. "There appears to be an inbalance there," Carey said.

Whittow was adamant in insisting that "we don't need three social workers for each policeman. They've changed the whole program from hardware to social programs," he charged.

Roger Schneider, Sheboygan mayor, citing a tieup in red tape which resulted in canceling a program there this year, and a representative from Green Bay called for looking deeper than just the budget. "I think we should take a look at the whole structure," Schneider said.

Dan Vande Hey, who is acting state planner for the entire program, agreed that some revamping might be needed. "I can understand the frustration on the local level" he said, promising that with the appointment of regional commissions, local input would be back in 1973.

"The law enforcement assistance administration (LEAA) says that 75 per cent of the funds must go to the local level and this can't be changed unless the local level signs off — so you do have control," he said.

Obviously irked and fired up by the debate, the alliance members passed a resolution calling for a delay in passing the budget and strongly urged each of its members to be on hand Monday when the council is scheduled to meet.

Cooperative purchasing idea gaining among state cities

BY DOUG KOPLIEN
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — Cooperative purchasing between municipalities has met with a lot of success and there appears to be a growing number of Wisconsin governmental units who will be getting together to stretch the tax dollar.

Donald Hassler, Neenah, head of the Department of Local Affairs and Development (DLAD) cooperative purchasing program, had an attentive audience here Friday as he spoke to the Wisconsin Alliance of Cities.

"A dollar saved is a dollar less on the tax levy," Hassler said, urging the leaders of Wisconsin's 16 largest cities to get into the program which he's trying to develop.

Results of an experiment in cooperative purchasing organized by Hassler — a joint purchase of traffic paint will be known in a couple of weeks when bids are opened.

Hassler predicts that municipalities may be able to save as much as a dollar a gallon on the $46,000 purchase.

The program received the strong endorsement of William Beyer, alliance executive secretary who suggested that the next commodity to be purchased jointly should be tires for municipal fleets.

The paint purchase program which includes several municipalities from Milwaukee to Green Bay, involved DLAD drawing specifications and the bidding procedure handled through Milwaukee which already has conducted a test to determine the municipal needs.

Prior to this, some municipalities had purchased paint through the State of Wisconsin, but this year the state switched to a hot paint application so municipalities had to go it alone.

Although it's a small item in most municipal budgets, Hassler hopes to be able to document cash savings and expand to other commodities.

Cooperative purchasing is nothing new. Hassler pointed out that as far back as 1931, Hamilton County, Ohio, started it and within the first 18 months documented cash savings of $400,000, or about 14 per cent.

Since then, others have developed nationwide and in Hennepin County, Minn., 49 municipalities have joined. Example of costs savings: in purchase of 112 automobiles, savings ranging from $100 to $700 per vehicle were recorded.

"Now, they have started to sell the old vehicles at auctions and are realizing more money than they did on trade-ins," Hassler pointed out.

He also cited examples in Wisconsin, such as in Milwaukee where 19 school districts and 19 municipalities have cooperated on purchasing and the school districts realized savings of 7 to 20 per cent.

"In buying gasoline, the price ranged from 11.09 cents a gallon to 28.5 cents a gallon, a 257 per cent difference," Hassler noted, adding that through a joint program all municipalities could get the lowest price.

"The aim of our program is to encourage a more scientific approach to purchasing," he said, adding that the department could have a manual ready for distribution sometime in 1973.

"One of the reasons for the lack of joint purchasing is a lack of information. For that reason we're scheduling seminars and the first one is going to be in Appleton on Feb. 8," he explained.

Hassler said a "state clearing house for purchasing information is going to be established" in Madison. It'll offer a bank of information for purchasing data and "the dissemination of information will be done on request, free of charge."

He also plans an area and regional approach by trying to get municipalities together to purchase together.

"We know there are roadblocks, but most of them are imaginery — not real. The first step is to get together and discuss the problem. And then develop specifications to meet everyone's needs and then pick a commodity.

"There's a savings in volume buying and everybody wins. You win by doing a better job; the supplier wins by going into larger volumes, and the taxpayer wins by getting more value for the tax dollar," he said.

Police & fire beat

CLINTONVILLE — Michael Heling, 18, 251 Modoc St., pleaded no contest to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while intoxicated Nov. 18, when he appeared in County Court Branch 2 before Judge Nathan Wiese here Wednesday.

Heling was fined $175 plus $9 costs. He will spend the mandatory five days in jail. His driver's license was suspended for one year.

Heling was arrested by the Clintonville police after his car struck a parked car on Third Street at 3:30 a.m. Nov. 18.

CLINTONVILLE — Darwin Huebner, 19, 165 Motor St., was found guilty on default judgment and forfeited bond of $100 fine plus costs of $9 on a charge of resisting a police officer Nov. 13, when he failed to appear in County Court Branch 2 court before Judge Nathan Wiese Wednesday. He had been arrested by the Clintonville police.

UW, VTAE facilities sharing plan for 2 cities approved by regents

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The University of Wisconsin and the state Vocational, Technical and Adult Education (VTAE) system would "double up" to share already existing facilities in Rice Lake and Fond du Lac under a plan approved Friday by the UW Board of Regents.

The board, meeting at the UW campus here, also agreed not to seek a second state law school at this time, preferring instead to maintain and promote growth of the present Madison campus law school.

The VTAE board must still approve the building-sharing plan, which was offered as an alternative to suggestions that UW close the low population, two-year centers and turn the physical facilities over to the vocational system.

Regent Bertram N. McNamara, Milwaukee, who worked on a committee studying the proposal, said the two UW centers have too few students for available space, while the voc centers are short of space.

He said the pilot program, pegged for three years, could lead to wider-ranging cooperation between the two systems.

Other regents said the plan represented a stepping-stone to more complete cooperation between the two state systems of higher education.

The plan also included: Coordinating of curricula so course overlapping is eliminated; lowering the UW fee schedule on the two campuses to parallel the vocational system fee guide, and complete sharing of all physical facilities on an equal basis.

The VTAE board has not made a recommendation on the plan.

McNamara said another proposal before the four-man committee—a total merger of the UW and vocational systems— was not realistic because the legislature, not regents, has the power to make such a decision.

But "if we fail in this cooperative venture," he said, "we will be faced with possible legislative action that will make the decision for us. We may then end up with a super board of education over all of higher education in the state."

In deciding not to pursue a second law school, the board accepted the suggestion of UW President John C. Weaver.

Weaver based his recommendation on a recent study committee report which concluded that while demand for legal education was growing, it was not sufficient to justify another public law school.

Weaver said legal education would not be neglected, and promised strong efforts at obtaining more money from the legislature so the Madison law school may maintain high academic standards.

The regents named Joseph W. Wiley, 38, as new assistant to the president of the UW system with responsibility for equal employment opportunities for minorities.

Wiley will work under Weaver's direction, helping develop programs to assure quality employment for minority groups within the UW system.

Ripon edges Waupaca

RIPON — Bob Sather capped a Ripon comeback with a pair of free throws in the final 22 seconds to give the hosts a 64-61 win over Waupaca Friday night in a key East Central Conference game.

Sather's charity hoops made the score 62-61, the first Ripon lead since an early 23-21 bulge, and Jeff Bryden threw in a shot at the buzzer to end the scoring surge.

After that 23-21 Ripon lead, Waupaca hit for 10 straight points and led up till the :22 mark of the last quarter. Ripon had to outscore the Comets, 19-11, in the last stanza to win.

Fouls hurt Waupaca with three of its starters drawing five personals each in the deciding quarter.

Ripon's Steve Hub netted 17 points to lead the winners, while Sather added 16 and Steve Weiske 13 points.

Kelly Taylor took game honors with 19 markers for the Comets.

Ripon remains unbeaten in four ECC games, while Waupaca is now 3-1.

Past few weeks happy ones for young Jeff

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Fate has not been kind to 10-year-old Jeff Staniske but at least the past few weeks have been happy ones.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Staniske of Ashwaubenon is afflicted with a rare terminal brain disease and doctors give him only about eight more months to live.

Though he is confined to a wheel chair and has little use of his arms or hands, Mrs. Staniske said, "All he talks about is how lucky he is because of all the wonderful things that are happening to him."

Since news of the youth's ailment reached the public through the media, the Staniske home has been flooded with cards, letters and gifts, she said.

"Everytime the telephone or doorbell rings, Jeff smiles from ear to ear and asks, 'What's next?' " she said.

The youth is a Green Bay Packer fan and he was treated to a dinner with player Clarence Williams and a visit from coach Dan Devine.

"He (Devine) was just wonderful," Mrs. Staniske said. "He sat in Jeff's room with him for about 45 minutes, holding his hand and telling him jokes."

The attention has also helped the family out with its medical bills. The "Friends of Jeff Staniske Fund" at Fox Heights State bank in Green Bay reports it has collected $5,000. It hopes to raise more with a benefit dance Dec. 15.

State writing pollution code for disposal of animal waste

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — After months of deliberation, consultation with agricultural experts and numerous hearings to which farmers were invited, the Department of Natural Resources is preparing to write orders controlling the management of animal wastes on the state's 60,000 livestock farms.

The provisions of a code prepared under the direction of a 1971 legislative act has been presented to the board of natural resources, which says it will consult with the state board of agriculture on the issues involved at a joint meeting next month.

Workshops slated

In February the University of Wisconsin agricultural extension service will hold a series of animal waste workshops around the state for final assurance that the agricultural industry is aware of the pending regulation and that livestock farmers understand it.

Under the terms of the law, the code will then be presented to the agricultural committees of the state Legislature, which under the provisions of law will be empowered to approve it and make it effective, but also may reject it if it is found to be unsatisfactory.

Provisions of the control plan were worked out with the assistance of specialists of the University of Wisconsin and were widely circulated to their members by the major farm organizations. The question has aroused considerable interest in the country as a whole because of this state's rank in livestock husbandry.

Draft order

Contrary to some beliefs, the draft order does not expressly command that farmers collect and store wastes in a tank, stack, or pond in order to control run off. Its declared objective is to prevent drainage or seepage of liquids into ground water. If that goal requires a special manure storage system, the code will set out standards of compliance. Winter manuring won't be prohibited, but approved land disposal practices will be suggested for those farms not having storage facilities. The general goal is to provide that farmers, like others, do not violate the provisions of the state water quality standards laws.

State acquires land on Whitcomb Creek

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — State acquisition of about 2,120 feet of frontage on Whitcomb Creek, one of the favorite native brook trout streams in Waupaca County has been announced by the state Department of Natural Resources.

The purchase will protect "this valuable resource" and provide public access for shoreline fishing and public parking, the agency said. The property was obtained by the state in exchange for about 14 acres of land granted to Stanley and Rose Carlson of Neenah.

Stoppage of church construction urged as ecology measure

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A California theologian has urged, as an ecology measure, that the nation's churches stop construction of new buildings.

The Rev. Dr. George Rupp of the University of Redlands also suggested that salaries of church employes should be set at a fixed limit as part of an effort to trim consumption of the earth's resources.

"Simplicity, frugality and self-sacrifice" are demanded in the times ahead, the Rev. Dr. Rupp said Tuesday.

Declaring that the planet cannot sustain continued economic growth indefinitely and that justice demands more equitable distribution of available resources, the Rev. Dr. Rupp told a general assembly of the National Council of Churches: "The most crucial tendency that must be confronted is the materialism that pervades American life.

"Instead of acquiescing to Western preoccupation with material products, the church must again work to focus human energies on what Paul (the apostle) calls the fruits of the spirit — on enterprises which only minimally deplete resources and cause pollution."

He proposed that the representatives of 33 denominations with about 43 million members "go on record as opposing all further construction of church buildings.

"It seems to me that only a moratorium on the church's exhorbitant and unnecessary investment in physical plants can render credible our rejection of indefinitely continued economic expansion."

He said this would not mean to stop forming new religious communities and suggested that homes, schools or community halls could be used as alternative sites for worship. He also said congregations could share existing facilities.

At the same time, the Rev. Dr. Rupp proposed that the assembly recommend that its member denominations set a maximum salary for all church employes — with money saved this way used to increase pay of those at the low end of the wage scale.

"This action would serve to symbolize our seriousness about reducing excessive consumption while, at the same time, emphasizing the need to redistribute the limited resources available," he said.

'Banned' priest in S. Africa to get some cheer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Roman Catholic faithful plan to sing Christmas carols outside the home of the Rev. Cosmas Desmond, 36, a priest who had been "banned" since June 1971.

They also will arrange delivery of a Christmas pudding Dec. 25 to the house where he lives under a modified form of arrest.

The government is not obliged to give any reason for banning persons. The crackdown on Father Desmond followed publication of his book "The Discarded People," which was critical of the way the government carried out resettlement of nonwhites who had been declared superfluous and moved from white areas.

Under banning orders, the person named usually is confined to his home from dusk to dawn and most of the weekends. Only his parents or a doctor can visit him during these hours.

Last June, Father Desmond defied the restriction to preach at Sunday services and take Communion. Newspapers were unable to print his sermons because a banned person must not be quoted. Later, the government relaxed the order, making it legal for Father Desmond to attend church on Sundays.

No charge has been brought against Father Desmond. A banning order normally runs five years, but the government has power to renew it

United Methodists at Seymour set concert

SEYMOUR — A Christmas concert and carol singing has been scheduled at the Seymour United Methodist Church at 8 p.m. Sunday. The program will include anthems, solos, duets, and a special number by the Assembly of God Church.

The Rev. Franklin J. Block will present an organ concert preceding the program at 7:30 p.m.

Women not likely to be Priests before 1978

LONDON (AP) — The Churc. England will not ordain any women as priests until 1978 at the earliest. Even if "substantial hurdles" are overcome, it will take six years for any resolution to allow women to enter the priesthood to pass through the church's various tiers of procedural acceptance.

That was the verdict of church officials after publication here of a major report, "The Ordination of Women to the Priesthood."

Gift giving day planned at St. Joseph

An effort to recapture the true meaning of Christmas is being made by the organizations of St. Joseph Catholic Church, under the guidance of the Rev. Gilbert Hemauer, OFM Cap.

A non-reciprocal gift giving day for the poor of the area and for people in the inner city of Milwaukee is planned during the coming week by the Christian Mothers, parish board, youth groups, Holy Name Society, Scout groups, Ladies Aid Mission Society, Youth-to Youth and the Third Order of St. Francis.

Hemauer has asked the community to participate in the program. Emphasis will be on the Dec. 16 and 17 weekends. The masses at St. Joseph during that weekend will be times for gathering the gifts, which may include money, food, new clothing and any other new gifts.

They may be brought to the altar at each of the masses: 5:05 and 6:30 p.m. Saturday and 5:30, 6:45, 8, 9:15 and 10:45 a.m. and noon Sunday.

The gifts may be gift wrapped but clearly labeled as to contents. They may be designated for local distribution in this community or left undesignated for areas such as the inner city year round project of the House of Peace, Milwaukee, which is served by Brother Booker Ashe, OFM Cap.

Ashe will participate in the homily at the Dec. 17 masses and will receive the gifts for the poor which will go to Milwaukee.

"We started the project because we felt we wanted to return to the spirit of the first Christmas and give without any expectation of return. In the face of poverty, gigantic nuclear arms power, material consumption, Christmas can offer an opportunity to respond to the day in a fresh and prophetic way," explained Hemauer.

"The coming of Jesus was not so much a reciprocal gift giving by the Father as it was a giving to those who could not return a gift. There was no checking last year's card list to see whom He should give to," the Capuchin priest said.

Anyone interested in participating in giving new gifts for the poor may contact Hemauer at 733-2611 or 734-7195. Arrangements can be made to receive gifts before the 16 and 17. All things will be distributed as quickly as possible before Christmas.

Distribution of gifts on the local level will be handled by a representative of Outagamie County Social Services, Mrs. Donald Grogan, who will coordinate the effort with the Salvation Army.

After the noon mass Dec. 17, the Third Order of St. Francis will have a potluck meal. Anyone who would like to participate is invited to do so and bring a dish for sharing.

Freedom priest elected missionary superior

The Rev. Daniel Kabat, OFM Cap., a native of Freedom, serving as a missionary in Nicaragua, has been elected to a three-year term as superior regular of the Capuchin missioners in Bluefields.

He is currently serving out of Managua, Nicaragua, Central America, but will be moving to Bluefields in the near future.

Kabat is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Kabat of Freedom. He is a 1948 graduate of St. Nicholas Grade School and attended St. Lawrence Seminary, Mt. Calvary, before joining the Capuchin Order in 1952. He was ordained to the priesthood in 1960 and assigned as a missionary in 1962.

As superior regular of the mission, the Freedom priest will be responsible for the spiritual and temporal welfare of the missionaries. With his two councilors, he will submit to the local bishop suggested assignments for each mission post and will appoint local superiors for each mission station once the assignments have been approved by the bishop.

Kabat also will be responsible for the continuing education of missioners in both pastoral and secular fields which will help them be of greater service to their local Christian communities and the church in Latin America.

Another responsibility will be to evaluate candidates for the Capuchin Order from the mission vicariate.

Kabat will be home in January to participate in the Midwest Capuchins Provincial Chapter, at the Monte Alverno Retreat Center.

ALC president is near death

MINNEAPOLIS — Doctors at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., have stated that there is no known medical treatment for the serious illness afflicting Dr. Kent S. Knutson, president of the American Lutheran Church.

His condition, the doctor said Dec. 1, continues to deteriorate.

Extensive tests carried on since Knutson's admission to St. Mary Hospital in Rochester on Oct. 23 have been unsuccessful in reaching a diagnosis. The most noticeable symptom has been Knutson's inability to speak or otherwise communicate. He has remained conscious.

A statement issued by a Mayo Clinic spokesman said that the ALC leader "has an unusual disorder of the central nervous system. The cause is unknown, and at the present time there is no specific treatment available. He remains hospitalized in serious condition."

The head of the 2.5 million member denomination became ill shortly after the ALC convention, Oct. 4-10. Last summer, during July and August, he had traveled to Indonesia, Hong Kong, New Guinea, Australia, and India

Relics of original 'St. Nick' enshrined

NEW YORK (AP) — Relics of St. Nicholas, the historical progenitor of Santa Claus, were enshrined Tuesday night in a Greek Orthodox church in Queens.

The relics had been in the Roman Catholic cathedral in Bari, Italy, since the 11th century, and their gift was described as one more sign of rapproachment between the two ancient churches.

"I hope this will continue to be a sign of our unity in Christ," said the Most Rev. Francis Mugavero, the Roman Catholic bishop of Brooklyn. "These remnants of St. Nicholas belong to all humanity."

"We are uniting Christianity under the shadow of the cross and the crucifix," said Archbishop Iakovos, the Greek Orthodox primate of North and South America.

St. Nicholas was the bishop of Myra in Asia Minor in the fourth century. Western Christians brought his remains to Bari after the great schism in the church in 1054.

Legends of his good works later evolved into the figure known in English-speaking countries as Santa Claus.

Most of the relics remain sealed in a vault in Bari, but the bishop there donated a fragment of the casket in which the saint's body had been transported, some skull fragments and a vial of myrrh.

They are contained in a gold reliquary that will rest in a case under a 17th century icon of the saint at the church of St. Nicholas in Flushing, Queens.

'Slight variation' in funding to hurt

BY CLIFF MILLER
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A few weeks ago, municipal officials from Wisconsin and Minnesota were told during a conference in Madison that estimates then circulating for local shares of federal revenue could be subject to "slight variation" when the checks actually came from Washington.

Today, it appeared that Appleton could be as much as $700,000 short in revenues by the end of next year, due to the variations between estimates built into the city's recently adopted budget and sums the U.S. Treasury Department now says the city will receive.

Official reaction at City Hall included anger, disbelief and numb resignation.

Finance Director Reynold Running was among officials who heard the Treasury Department official in Madison caution about "slight variation."

"When it gets to over 30 per cent, that to me is no longer a slight variation," said Running. He called it "irritating and disgusting," and said he has lost faith in anything the federal government says about the new revenue sharing program.

"We're not going to panic yet," said Running. "They've given us one set of figures that were erroneous. . .We'll believe what we get when the check comes." But he admitted he expects the check to be as small as figures released Thursday and Friday by the Treasury Department and various Wisconsin congressmen indicate.

Appleton is not alone in suffering major financial setbacks due to the apparently over-optimistic early estimates. There are also some communities that will receive more than they had expected, and they are happy. Of the cities and villages in Outagamie County, however, Kimberly is the only one showing a gain.

Wisconsin and its counties and municipalities as a whole will receive about $300,000 less than originally estimated, or a total of $22 million for the first half-year payments.

The Treasury figures list sums to be paid in checks to be received early this month. They will cover the first half of this year, retroactively, under the newly adopted General Revenue Sharing Act. The payments for the second half will arrive during January, and a Treasury spokesman in Washington told The Post-Crescent they should match the first payments.

But the municipal budgets adopted in the past few days or weeks in the Fox Valley also include estimates of revenue for 1973, of which three quarters are to be paid during the year and the fourth payment in January, 1974.

In Appleton's case, the city expected its first check for half of this year to total $547,860. The Treasury Department now says it will only be $335,075.

The second check in January was expected to equal the first, and will — but will be equally short of expectations. That brings the city's total overestimate for 1972 to $385,570.

Since the city also counted on more than $1.5 million in 1973 revenue sharing to be paid before the end of next year, if that estimate is as far out of line, the total shortage by year-end could be $700,000 or more.

Rep. John Byrnes, R-Green Bay, had announced figures for Outagamie County and its municipalities Thursday. It was assumed then that Appleton also would receive a second check as its share of Calumet County revenues. The city had expected $70,000, half this month and half in January.

Inquiries Friday found that assumption to be erroneous. The Treasury spokesman told a reporter by telephone that figures announced for cities located in more than one county are total amounts, and Appleton's share of Calumet County revenues is included in the $335,000 sum.

According to published statements attributed to the Treasury, the variations result because the estimates were based on 1965-1966 figures and the actual payments will be based on 1971 fiscal year data.

The spokesman in Washington confirmed that and added a new mystery to the situation by denying that the department has ever issued any estimates for 1973.

Asked how Wisconsin municipalities came upon the 1973 figures they used in their budgets, the spokesman said, "I don't know. I guess somebody was doing their own figuring." Local officials relied on sources such as congressmen, the Wisconsin Department of Revenue, League of Wisconsin Municipalities and Alliance of Cities. All had 1973 estimates, and all agreed, often to the last dollar.

There was little indication that there might be a change of any magnitude. U. S. Rep. William Steiger, R-Oshkosh, announced Treasury estimates for his 6th District counties and municipalities, and did warn they were preliminary and subject to change. But like Running, who heard the term "slight variation" in Madison, most officials apparently assumed any change would be relatively small.

There will be no chance for local officials to challenge Treasury Department arithmetic in the near future, either. The department said the data used to calculate local revenue shares will not be made public for some time, perhaps sometime next year.

Of the cities and villages along the Fox River in Outagamie County, Kimberly will receive more than anticipated in its first check, $36,148 instead of a budgeted $21,000.

But Kaukauna drops from $165,995 to $103,482 (the reverse of a report in The Post-Crescent Thursday based on a quick look at the budget), Combined Locks drops from $28,000 to $26,111, and Little Chute falls from $35,990 to $26,984.

Seymour, according to Clerk Josephine Marnocha, will gain despite losing. The county's smallest city expected $19,000 but will receive $15,699. But no 1973 estimate was included in the new budget, so those payments will make up for the loss.

The county's towns also receive shares, but are in no trouble because the timing of their budget-setting differs from cities and towns, coming next Spring. They will have more revenue, and it doesn't really matter how the sum received compares with estimates because there were none in their case.

The officials in cities and villages coming up short can curse the Treasury Department, but in the end the practical impact will have to come in the form of reduced spending, increased borrowing or a year-end deficit to be made up in higher property taxes a year from now — or a combination of two or all three.

County to face at least one battle

December normally would be a quiet month for the Outagamie County Board with Tuesday's meeting coming on the heels of the five-day November budget meeting, but at least one major battle is expected and a second one is in the background.

A request from the airport committee for authority to hire an architect to design a new airport terminal building is expected to draw sharp debate from several quarters on the board.

The committee is seeking an okay to take $5,000 from the airport trust fund to hire the architect. A 14,000 square foot terminal costing about $420,000 has been proposed to replace the present smaller facility. Air Wisconsin has indicated it would be willing to commit itself to leasing about half the space for its operations and general offices.

Also lurking in the background is a possible attempt to get the county board to reconsider last month's decision to enter into an agreement with Allis-Chalmers for a solid waste shredder plant.

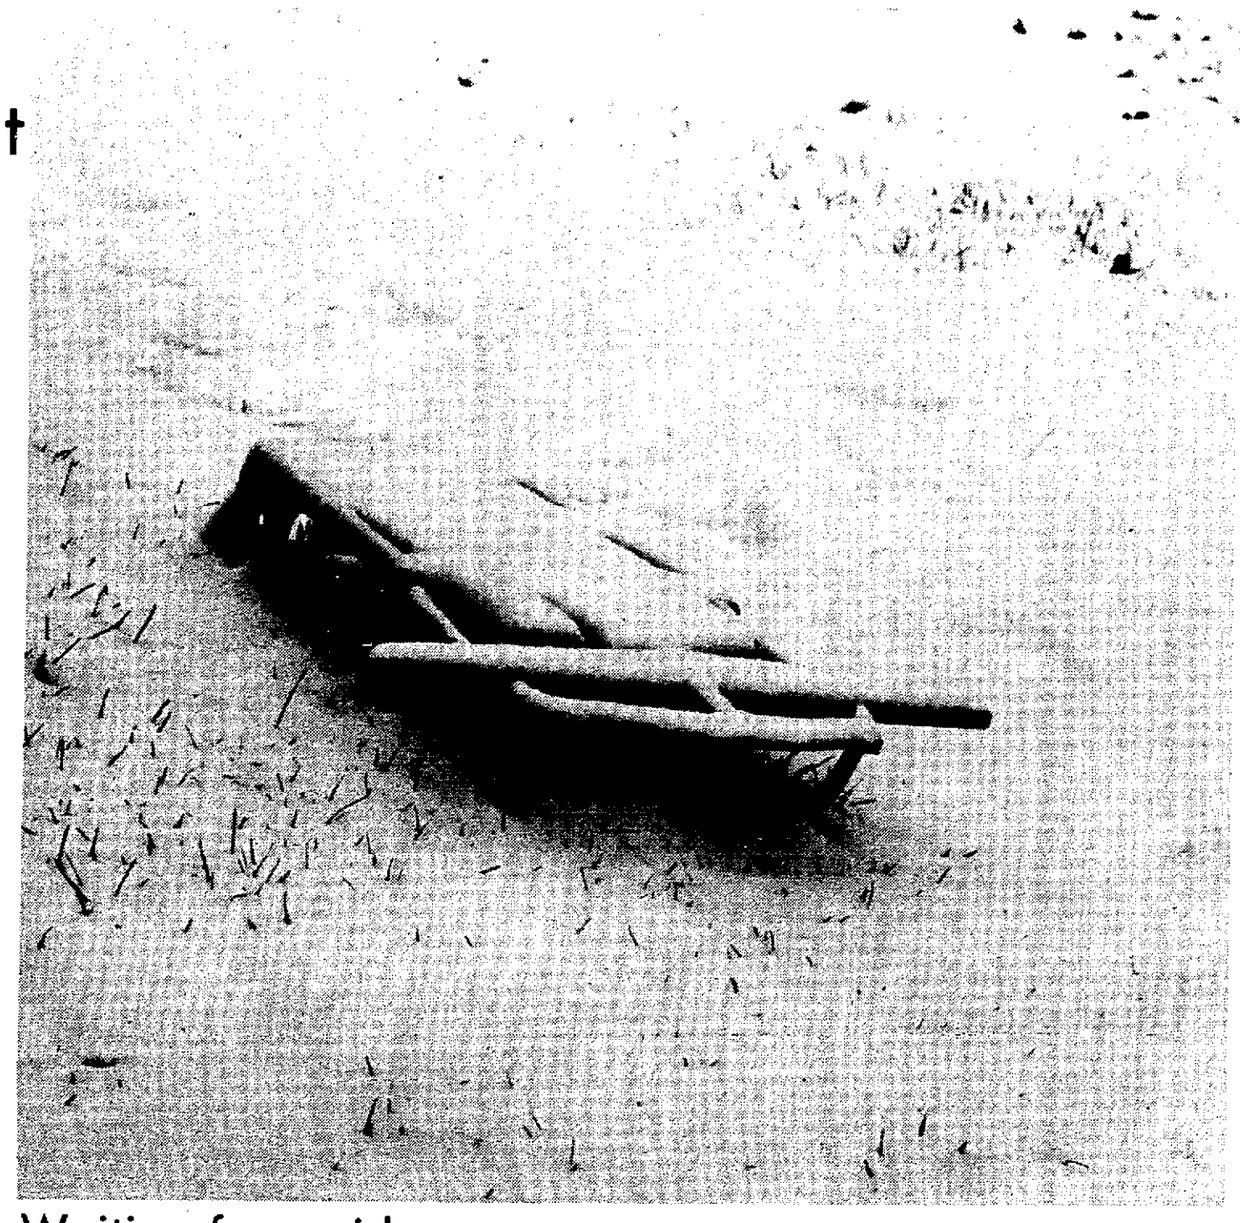

That action passed 27-9 but vocal opponents on t e board, along with Al Fischer, sales manager for an incinerator firm which was an unsuccessful bidder, have indicated they will push for reconsideration.

One of the opponents, Supv. Fred Rehfeldt, who also is an Appleton alderman, has been leading a fight in the city council to delay any potential city participation in use of the shredder plant.

In new business to come before the board, authorization will be sought to hire a consultant to help determine the space needs of the various offices in the courthouse. The consultant was requested by County Executive Alvin Woehler and somewhat reluctantly endorsed by the property, building and maintenance committee.

A broadened county retirement policy also is being submitted for consideration. Under the new policy, all county employes, except elected officials and sheriff's department personnel will be required to retire at age 65.

All protective occupational participants in the sheriff's department will be required to retire at age 60 for the year 1973 and at age 55, effective Jan. 1, 1974.

State water clean-up deadlines get flexibility

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau

MADISON — Because of new federal law, the state board of natural resources has approved what it calls a more "flexible" rule for enforcing water pollution control deadlines directed to industries and municipalities.

Meeting here Friday, the board said where there is a showing of good faith effort to accommodate the state requirements for pollution abatement installations or their improvement, it will provide extensions as a means of accommodating the conflicting standards of the federal law.

The decision will be especially important in some districts, including the Fox River Valley and other localities within the Lake Michigan basin facing compliance deadlines next year.

Federal codes

The new federal standards are less demanding, and may permit compliance with clean water standards as late as 1977, it was said.

In another major action, the board adopted an order containing rules for the surveillance and monitoring of industrial effluents discharged into public waters and air emissions subject to control under the state air pollution control laws, including a schedule of fees to be assessed by the state to cover the costs of such work.

Monitoring was ordered by the legislature two years ago in an act which authorized charges upon industries and others to provide a file of data that could be used to prepare air and water pollution abatement orders. The rules and the fee schedules were evolved after extensive hearings during the last year.

Fee schedule

The monitoring information will, in effect, be used to finance enforcement of the pollution orders, officials explained. The board adopted the schedule which provides for annual fees of up to $10,000, although there was some discussion about asking the legislature to change the schedule to permit higher charges against private corporations with multiple pollution sources.

The monitoring data will be stored in computers and provide ready support for possible revision of air and water pollution orders, as well as prosecution for violations of their provisions.

The order expressly asserts it is not a "licensing program for effluents and air emissions," but a tool for enforcing pollution controls. They are subject to change, moreover, according to increasing control technology and knowledge on the effects of air and water contamination.

The DNR water protection staff said that one of the reasons for the more "flexible" deadline policy on compliance with water pollution abatement orders was a realization of the financing obstacles encountered by some defendants in pollution proceedings, and notably municipalities.

Some outstanding orders had demanded completion of abatement installations at the end of this year and it became apparent that some municipalities and others could not comply in spite of good faith efforts.

In the Fox River Valley many orders outstanding contain deadlines for 1975 at the latest. The federal goal is strict compliance with approved standards two years later. To insist adamantly on literal compliance with the previous state orders in all cases, officials said, would be unfair in view of the latitude extended in the new federal law, and the good faith effort made by municipalities especially.

The more lenient plan was brought in by a subcommittee headed by Richard Stearn of Sturgeon Bay.

New London projects offset federal funds

NEW LONDON — Two major projects totaling over $94,000 will offset the $93,000 the city will receive from federal revenue sharing, and cause the $3 per $1,000 assessed valuation tax increase in the city's proposed 1973 operational budget.

But while the tax for city purposes will increase, the overall tax rate, for state, county, schools and vocational school in addition to city purposes, will drop $3.51 in Outagamie County and $8.79 per $1,000 in the Waupaca County portion of the city.

Aldermen have budgeted $27,000 for phosphorus removal chemicals that will be needed beginning Jan. 1 for new facilities at the city's sewage treatment plant. The state Department of Natural Resources (DNR) ordered the city to have the removal operations in effect by 1973.

The council has also budgeted $67,043 for the reconstruction of Pershing Road, which is scheduled for next year. While the city will share the costs with the state and Waupaca County, all engineering fees will be paid by New London.

City Clerk Mrs. Melva Rickaby said this week that the tax rates in the city will be $74.22 in Waupaca County, down from last year's $83.02, and $77.18 in the Outagamie County, down slightly from last year's $80.69.

The public hearing on the budget is set for 8 p.m. Dec. 19 in the city council chambers.

DNR wants to issue waste discharge permits

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has been asked to give the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources interim authority to issue waste discharge permits under the new federal water pollution control law.

The state Board of Natural Resources made that request Friday and also asked that the DNR be given wider latitude in deciding how to prosecute pollutors while procedures are worked out.

The new law authorizes the EPA, while retaining veto power, to permit state agencies to issue permits if the state's regulations meet the federal agency's standards.

Dischargers were required under the old law to provide equipment which would keep their discharge from reducing the quality of the water into which it went, while the new law is aimed at raising the quality of the effluent.

Oliver Williams, assistant administrator of the state Division of Environmental Protection, said fulfillment of the board's second request was needed to spell out the department's authority in extending deadlines for a few dischargers.

The board approved a set of regulations which are designed to force industrial dischargers to help pay the cost of monitoring air and water quality, despite a dispute over the definition of "person" in the rules.

The rules include a register of toxic and hazardous substances along with a fee schedule ranging from $5 to $10,000 which would take effect if more than a designated minimum amount were discharged. Each "person" affected would also be required to pay a $50 administrative fee.

Harold Jordahl of Madison voted against adoption of the regulations because he said the definition of "person" would allow a company with several plants to pay a single fee.

New London officials pledge stern action against snowmobilers

NEW LONDON — The city's snowmobile ordinance will be enforced strictly by the police department, Chief Jack Algiers said this week, and youthful offenders will be referred to juvenile courts if the problems caused by the young drivers don't cease.

Algiers said that "95 per cent of the complaints we get (on snowmobiles) involve youngsters 12-14 years old." The drivers, he said, operate their machines on city streets and across private property, including residents' lawns.

"There's far too many people buying far too many youngsters snowmobiles, at too young an age," he added, "and all they do is let them go."

Algiers said he has conferred with Waupaca County Judge Nathan Weise, who handles juvenile cases, and said the offenders will be referred to the court when they are caught.

A more stringent ordinance could also come if the problems continue, he added. "If we continue having these kinds of problems, I am seriously considering asking the City Council to prohibit anyone under 16 years of age to operate a snowmobile in the city limits."

Algiers said that area snowmobile clubs, including the local Mo Ski-Tow Valley Snowmobile Club, have offered their help to law enforcement agencies.

"Some of the problems hurt the snowmobile clubs who are making a sincere effort to control these things," he said.

The ordinance, which was passed last February, allows snowmobiling in Hatten, Riverside and Abraham Parks, the baseball field across from the senior high school, the Northside Industrial Park site and the former sanitary landfill site. Snowmobile trails and loading spots have been designated and marked by the park board, and signs also tell operators where the machines are prohibited.

The machines are also prohibited from operating on sidewalks and right of ways in the city, but may cross a public right of way after coming to a complete stop.

The ordinance also forbids the machines from 10:30 p.m. until 7 a.m., except when operators are going to or from their homes.

The ordinance carries a maximum fine of $50 and thirty days in jail. The machines can also be impounded for up to 60 days.

Homebuilder's party

CLINTONVILLE — The Homebuilders will have a Christmas party beginning with a pot luck supper at 7 p.m. Sunday at the United Methodist Church.

Members are to bring gifts for Central Colony.

Election of officers will be held.

Change recommended for traffic department

CHILTON — Several recommendations regarding setting up a new depositing system for the traffic department were discussed Friday with members of the Calumet County finance committee. Dist. Atty. Franklin Schmeider and Marlyce Glysch, municipal auditor for the state Bureau of Municipal Audit.

It was recommended that a new rubber stamp be purchased for the traffic department, designating "For Deposit Only, Calumet County Traffic Department." It was further recommended that all receipts of cash and cash items be limited to the radio operators.

Prior to this time, checks paid to the traffic department for accident report copies were endorsed by a use of a stamp designating "Calumet County Traffic Police, Victor Juno, captain," and cashed in a local bank other than the working bank of the county.

Another recommendation calls for the verification of all cash received by the operators from one operator to the other when they leave their shifts. The bookkeeper will verify each of the cash receipts and prepare her deposits, which will now be made to the county treasurer at least once a month.

Previously, Juno would make deposits once or twice a year.

A $25 working fund to make change also will be set up in the sheriff's department.

The new bookkeeping system was devised after a routine audit of the traffic department revealed financial discrepancies in the traffic accounts.

The whole matter was more or less shrugged off as "sloppy bookkeeping" by county officials.

Juno turned $1,485.31 over to the county treasurer on Nov. 17, more than a week after a state auditor went to the district attorney with certain undisclosed information.

The money Juno paid to the treasurer, for the traffic department he heads, was to cover parking ticket fines and revenue from accident report sales accounts, according to the receipts he was issued.

In an interview with Miss Glysch after the meeting, a reporter asked if any discrepancies were noted in last year's audit. She replied that payments of the fines "were not timely."

As far as the county protection of persons and property committee, to which Juno reports, is concerned, the entire matter is closed and will be resolved under the new system that went into effect immediately.

Unpublicized new law set to free government data

BY ARTHUR E. ROWSE

WASHINGTON — A little known law enacted by the 92nd Congress and signed by President Nixon last month may lead to disclosure of many government secrets affecting consumers and bring the demise of some prestigious advisory committees operating behind the scenes.

The legislation is called the Federal Advisory Committee Act. It grew out of rising concern in Congress and elsewhere about the number of highly influential committees, consisting mostly of business executives who stand to benefit from the decisions, in the innermost government sanctums.

Ralph Nader helped to spotlight the situation two years ago when he pointed out the network of business advisory committees working within the White House Office of Management and Budget (OMB).

He said these groups, often working without even records or minutes of meetings, managed to exercise veto powers over requests of some agencies for approval of questionnaires to business firms.

Nader said one of these hidden committees had effectively blocked for seven years a proposed inventory of waste matter being dumped into the nation's waterways by firms, some of which were represented on the advisory committee passing on the issue for the OMB.

Now, two years later, the proposed questionnaire is still collecting dust. Its new resting place is the National Industrial Pollution Control Council, another network of business executives working largely in secrecy.

The council, which is financed by tax funds and works out of offices in the Commerce Department, has not been able to decide what to do with the proposed water pollution survey.

In fact, the council has not met since last February. A scheduled meeting for last June was suddenly cancelled after Nixon issued an executive order designed to open up meetings and records of such groups.

Proponents of the law just signed by the President accused the White House of issuing the executive order primarily in an attempt to head off the proposed legislation, which was stronger than the President's order.

As a result of the new law, such groups as the council may be phased out. One of the aims of the statute is to reduce the number of advisory committees. There are an estimated 3,000 in the federal bureaucracy.

But its main purpose is to open up the workings of these panels. When the new law takes effect on Jan. 6, advisory committees will have to keep verbatim transcripts of meetings, submit copies of all reports to the Library of Congress and make records of proceedings available for copying.

In addition, interested persons must be granted permission to attend meetings, appear before them or file statements, subject to "reasonable" rules governing such affairs.

Legislative aides familiar with the situation predict that the pollution control council will "wither away" rather than face the type of exposure required by the law. But the council is still issuing reports generally urging that business be allowed to handle the pollution fight without new laws. The latest report, issued last week, deals with solid waste.

Another possible casualty of the new legislation is the National Business Council for Consumer Affairs, with a similar setup in Commerce. Its reports have urged voluntary improvements over legislative solutions of problems in the areas of advertising, packaging, and credit.

Social Security is aiming for equality of men with women

Talk today centers on women lacking equality with men — but it's been the other way around in figuring retirement benefits under Social Security, according to Frank M. Donnick, manager of the Appleton Social Security office.

Donnick said a woman of 65 who always has earned the maximum amount that could be credited for Social Security would get about $269 a month if she retires now. But a man — who is the same age and has exactly the same earnings — would get only $259.

The new Social Security law will eliminate that difference over the next three years, he said.

Under present law, benefit amounts for both men and women are based on average earnings, but average earnings are figured up to age 62 for women and up to age 65 for men.

"Both men and women can strike out some years of low earnings, but because the different ages are used, it works out that men must use three more years of earnings than women do in figuring the average yearly earnings on which the monthly benefit rate is based," Donnick said.

Under the new law, men who reach 62 in 1973 will be able to drop an additional year of low earnings, men reaching 62 in 1974 will drop an additional two years and men reaching 62 in 1975 will drop an additional 3 years.

Also, reduced benefits now will be provided for nondisabled widowers at age 60, as is now the case for widows.

Opinion

THE Post-Crescent

Mr. Wiegner and spending

Edward A. Wiegner is Gov. Lucey's secretary of revenue and administrator of the tax laws of the state. He is also one of the most aggressive and innovative of the principal men the governor has chosen to run the key state agencies which under law he is entitled to control as a result of the modified "cabinet" system of state administration installed in Madison a few years ago.

Secretary Wiegner does not confine his interests or his statements to his own agency, He has frequently spoken out in urgent terms about the defects of local government, although it is difficult to perceive how they can be construed to be within his realm of responsibility. Not long ago he attracted wide notice with the declaration — presumably with the approval of his chief — that if local governments cannot manage their money affairs more prudently and cautiously, the state will be obliged to intervene and to impose controls on them. He was speaking of the outlook for federal revenue shares in local treasuries, and Gov. Lucey's declared hope to funnel more state money into local budgets to assure that the upward curve of property taxation will be arrested.

Plainly Mr. Wiegner feared that some mayors and aldermen would use some of the money windfalls for other than property tax replacement. Plainly he was annoyed at the prospect, so displeased, indeed, that he felt obliged to issue a public warning from his appointive office in the state capitol.

Now the governor's man who moved from a college lecture podium to one of the most important of the managerial jobs in state affairs has presented his own biennial funding request. It has not had the attention that it probably deserves in the context of his anxious recent public speaking.

It asks for a muscular 25 per cent increase in his appropriations for the next two years. Some of the increases can be explained away as the cost of inflation. But the revenue department chief cannot use that explanation for the whole of the increase that is clearly beyond the permissible scope of his instructions from the governor, if Mr. Lucey's "austerity" stance has any meaning. As an example, his staff would be enlarged by about 161 persons, or a generous 15 per cent.

He has explained, of course, that the cause is his plan to expand his services, including one that would take over from localities a substantial part of their historic task of property valuation. Thus the question is posed: is the enlargement of municipal services by mayors and aldermen under the immediate gaze of their local constituents, for purposes they regard as worthy and upon which they will stake their offices at the next elections, less defensibel than the enlargement by an exceptionally generous degree of Mr. Wiegner's little army in Madison, especially when he has no worries about standing for reelection?

A gift to grow on

Traditionally, we place an extra candle on a child's birthday cake — one for each year, and one "to grow on." As Christmas nears, with its intrinisic tradition of helping the needy, CARE asks us to remember the world's hungry children, whose birthday prospects are reflected in these grim statistics:

In the emerging nations, children under five form 20 per cent of the population but represent over 60 per cent of the deaths, with malnutrition the biggest killer. Of those who survive, more than half will be retarded physically or mentally because of malnutrition.

To prevent such tragedies, the holiday-season CARE Food Crusade appeal seeks $7,500,000 to help feed 28 million people, nearly all children, during the coming year. At baby and preschool centers, schools and other sites, the young will be served regularly — not just to keep them alive but to build healthy bodies and sound minds, so they may grow into productive adults. Linked with CARE self-help and medical aid, the food gifts develop future self-sufficiency in 34 countries from Latin America to Africa, Asia and the Middle East.

Because host governments share operating costs and the U.S. donates farm abundance, our dollars are multiplied. For example: $5 gives 1,500 youngsters a protein-rich bowl of porridge; $10 serves a full lunch to 900 children; $25 helps feed 25 pupils for 3 months. From India, a schoolboy wrote: "To the American People . . . Our soul thanks you." His words will echo in the hearts of millions of children, and their parents, if you send your contribution check to CARE.

Reading the constitution

Our Madison news bureau relates that a cozy plan for an accommodation of the political difficulties of the state Senate Republican majority, and the desire of Lt. Gov. Martin Schreiber for a boost of his extremely modest salary, has come to naught.

As originally reported by Tim Wyngaard of our Madison bureau, the Republican Senate leadership conceived the idea of luring Mr. Schreiber from the presiding officer's podium, thus to permit one of their own partisan persuasion to command the gavel and make the strategically important procedural rulings in the legislature's upper house. In return, they would devise a new law to make Mr. Schreiber an actual rather than a supposed assistant state executive, thus to fatten somewhat the $7,500 annual salary which is less than some employes of clerical rank in the state service establishment are being paid.

But it now appears that the politically sapient Gov. Lucey has quickly apprehended the motivation of the maneuver and its planned consequences. Without his endorsement of whatever legislation would be put forward to execute this bi-partisan ploy, of course, the salary change could not be made.

It will strike the reflective and moderately informed citizen, however, that this was a lost cause upon its inception, for a number of other reasons. The role of the lieutenant governor is set out in state constitutional law, and in terms as brief as they are unmistakable.

He shall be president of the Senate, that basic law, superseding any statutory enactment, asserts succinctly. It is difficult to conceive how the legislature could, even if it tried, extend or otherwise modify that clear prescription of his regular duty and function The only other provision applying to the office names him as first in succession to the governorship in the event of the death or incapacitation of the governor, or temporarily, when the governor is absent from his office and outside the state.

There is another rule in the constitutional code of the state, namely, that the compensation of an elected officer cannot be increased during the term of office for which he was elected. Conceivably, the legislature could arrange for Mr. Schreiber to be carried on two payrolls, one as Lieutenant Governor Schreiber and one as plain Martin Schreiber But the evasion would be so obvious as to be politically dangerous, and surely there would be a test in the courts of such circuitous self-serving. Mr. Schreiber is the victim of the ambition that led him to run for the four year term at an admittedly absurd salary. But his teammate Mr. Lucey has made a realistic and necessary decision in his veto of an unworthy scheme when viewed from any direction.

John Wyngaard

Money name of political game

MADISON — Ten years ago the public recording of a $24,000 expenditure by a candidate for the modest office of state senator would have raised a public outcry.

Twenty years ago the suggestion that an unsuccessful candidate for a nomination for a seat in the U. S. Congress could spend $75,000 or more would have been denounced as fabrication.

Today such reports, reflecting the filings of candidates victorious and defeated, have become items in the routine grist of political news and scarcely a grumble is heard in any quarter. An occasional loser is belatedly concerned about finding an excuse for the humiliation and disappointment and electoral rejection of his ambitions.

In Milwaukee one of the leading members of the Assembly who showed a certain casualness about his obligations on reporting such matters earlier in the year, managed finally to file his concluding report on time. It showed the handsome total of over $13,000 spent.

More than his pay

His district is a small and compact downtown section. With a juvenile-size whistle, he could have made himself heard from border to border. But he is an ambitious man, and he ran scared, and somehow managed to gather in more money than he will be paid during the next year on the public payroll.

Money has become an obsessive element in American politics everywhere, and it deeply concerns thoughtful citizens who had always assumed that their Wisconsin system was less cynical about such matters and, in any event, was subject to controls in the spirit of representative government and democratic elections.

Gov. Patrick Lucey's campaign club today has in the bank, presumably earning interest, money that was raised a year ago for his probable 1974 re-election campaign. Other leading men including Sens. Proxmire and Nelson (Republicans cannot be cited here because they have not won those high offices lately) have trusted campaign agents squirreling away campaign fund deposits raised during the long intervals between their runs for six year terms.

Republicans in this state today contemplating high office candidacies two years hence, it can be asserted with utter confidence, are wondering more about where the money will be found than about any other pragmatic consideration.

What is most dangerous is that the relation of money and politics and the possibility that excessive reliance upon finding it is weakening the idea of popular government are now outside the realm of partisan debate.

Liberals used to protest that they were handcuffed by the lack of money to compete for the voters' attention with their rivals. They have been silenced. They have learned that political money follows political power. If there is a Wisconsin difference in Republican and Democratic funding today, it is that the Democrats generally find it easier to raise what they want.

Democrats are silent

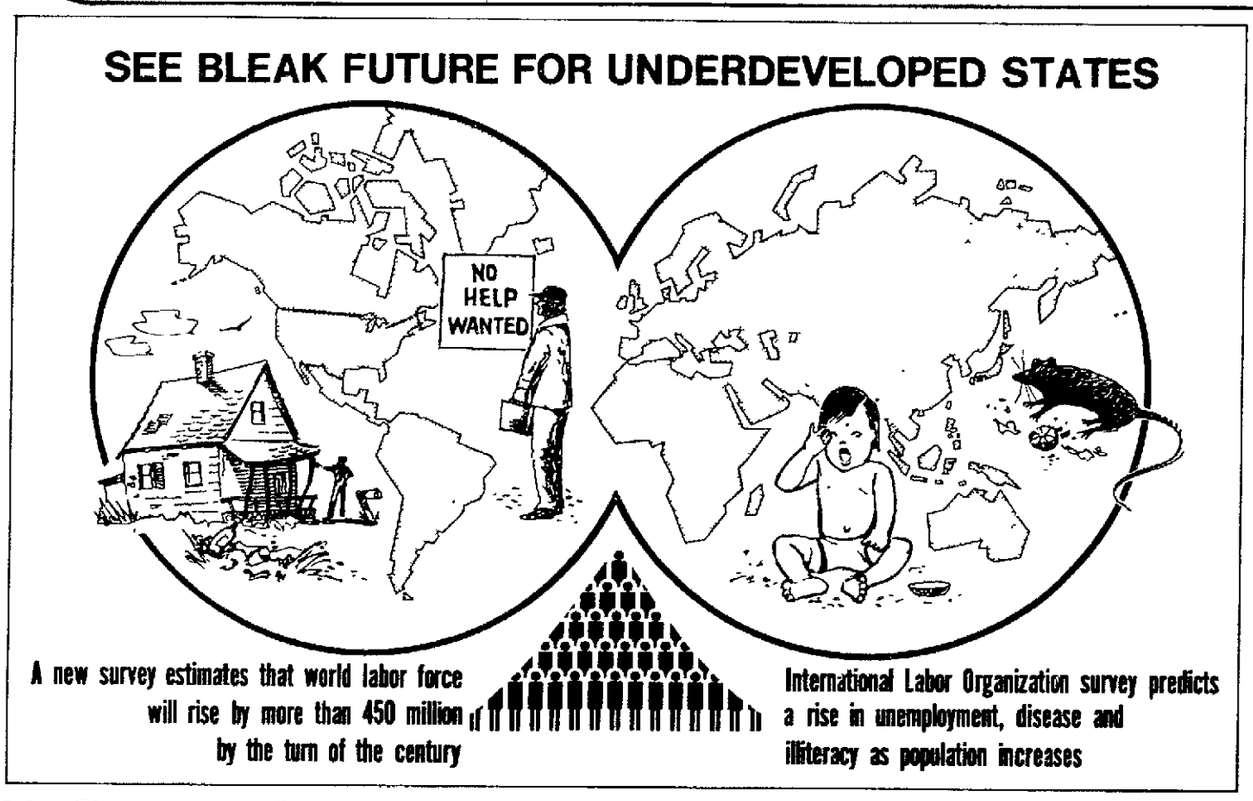

The silence of Democrats is especially suggestive here. On virtually every level of state politics, they have the advantage because they have the powerful advantage of incumbency, which brings with it the opportunity to collect dollars for campaign financing more easily.

Moreover, the reporting controls are more nominal than real. There are no audits. What the candidate, or his agent, reports is accepted as compliance with the law — if he gets the document into the Capitol on time.

There are elaborate fictions. "Voluntary" committees report expenditures, but the candidate on whose behalf they are made can legally pretend he knows nothing about them.

It is possible that a candidate in a competitive situation can devote a couple of months to traveling and beating the bushes for votes without spending even a dime? Reports say precisely that. They also say that the "voluntary" expenditures are entirely outside his knowledge.

The situation cries out for a reformer in the old Wisconsin mold. But he is nowhere to be seen. The politicians are on a treadmill. Whatever their private reflections and doubts, they are unable to escape, as they see it.

ILO study sees population crisis

BY HANNS NEUERBOURG

GENEVA (AP) — A study by the International Labor Organization suggests that, if the population growth continues unchecked, rising unemployment, disease and illiteracy will foil international efforts to help developing nations.

The study is based on estimates that at the present rate, the population of the less developed countries will rise to 5 billion by the turn of the century. The survey predicted an increase of 457 million workers, in the world labor force by 1985.

The survey estimated that by 1985 "between one half and two thirds of all new entrants to the labor force would require newly created openings." Other points made by the study included:

— Education and training: attempts to expand facilities failed to keep pace with the number of children. Millions of youngsters never get any education. "Only half of the developing world's children receive any schooling whatever after 11 or 12 years of age . . . the number of illiterate adults in the world keeps growing by about four million a year . . . Dropouts swell the already glutted job market. Faced with this situation, ILO's worldwide vocational training programs are "just a drop of water in the ocean."

— Health: "The provision of adequate medical care is doubly impeded. To the extent that population pressure contributes to poor health, it increases the need . . . At the same time, it obviously does so directly by multiplying the number of potential patients."

— Housing: There is little hope to achieving the target of about 1.4 billion new dwellings by the year 2000 "to provide reasonable housing standards."

The study said that so far about 35 underdeveloped countries have adopted family planning programs representing about 66 per cent of the Third World program. India spearheaded this move, reducing its level of births by some 10 million since the program started in 1969.

The study recalled that the Chinese representative told the Stockholm environment conference that it was "wholly groundless to think that population growth in itself will give rise to poverty and backwardness."

But the survey said that the ILO was concerned that the present rate "is not only aggravating unemployment, but also slowing down — if not altogether wiping out in some cases — economic and social progress achieved through development efforts."

Alioto typifies Italian revival

Italian-Americans are searching for a new symbol of group identity and a national political voice — and many believe they have now found it in San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto.

Somewhere between four and twenty-one million Americans trace their ancestry to Italy, depending on whose statistics you accept. They are the largest of the white ethnic minority groups, and their votes are concentrated in the Northern states with the large electoral blocs.

Yet Italians have been slower than any other white ethnic group but the Polish to gain economic and political power. They have been unfairly tarred with the image of the Godfather. Almost two-thirds of them hold only blue-collar jobs; the average Italian family in 1969 earned the modest wage of $8,000 a year. There has never been an Italian President or Vice President; national political figures of Italian descent are rare

Thirst for identity

Like other white ethnic minorities, however, the Italians are experiencing a reawakened interest in their heritage and a new thirst for national identity.

"It's chic to be Italian these days," Alioto observed jubilantly at a dinner given here last week by the Italian Executives of America. And increasingly it appears the most chic Italian of all is Alioto himself.

Since he was cleared of criminal and civil charges last spring, Alioto has become the hottest item on the Italian American speaking circuit. Italian-language newspapers followed his legal troubles in great and sympathetic detail, and most have treated him as a hero and martyr ever since his vindication.

There are hundreds of Italian-oriented organizations in the country, and Alioto has been invited to appear before most of them. He has been presented "man of the year" awards by major Italian groups in Los Angeles, Milwaukee, Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit. He has addressed Italian organizations in more than twenty cities. He starred a few months ago in a one hour CBS documentary on Italian American culture.

Alioto was introduced at the executives' banquet as "the Italian-American most likely to succeed." After two terms as mayor, what he would like to succeed at next is the governorship of California. And after that, who knows? He was, after all, nearly Sen. Hubert Humphrey's running mate in 1968.

Alioto is utilizing his popularity to build a loose alliance of Italian organizations outside California to support his campaign with money and volunteers. And it does not seem to bother his supporters that two of his potential rivals for the statehouse in two years are also Italian — Assembly Speaker Robert Moretti and Senate Majority Leader George Moscone.

"Alioto's candidacy is important to all Italians because they identified with his fight to clear his name of those outrageous charges that he had ties with the Mafia," an Alioto enthusiast explains "Most Italians have suffered slurs associating them with the Mafia at one time or other in their lives, and his victory was theirs "

It took Alioto three years, but he survived not only the accusations of Look magazine that he was linked to the Mafia but a civil suit filed by the state of Washington and a bribery indictment filed by the Federal Government In his second libel trial, Alioto won a unanimous jury decision that the Look article was substantially false and defamatory. And he was cleared in court of both the civil and criminal charges.

Alioto's political career, which once seemed doomed by those problems, is off to a fresh start. And it is an asset that, as an Italian executives' official commented, "He speaks Italian very well for a born American."

Musical programme presented

100 YEARS AGO
Appleton Crescent, Dec. 7, 1872.

A large and enthusiastic audience assembled at Bertschy Hall on Wednesday evening last, to participate in the entertainment given by the Friends of the School. The musical part of the programme was interesting — the instrumental pieces being rendered by Wickbold's Band, in excellent time and the selections were choice. The School Children sung a piece in German, followed by the "Watch on the Rhine," sung energetically by members of the Turner Society. An excellent supper was spread for the public, and the drawing of the prizes closed a successful financial as well as social evening's entertainment.

25 YEARS AGO
Saturday, Dec. 6, 1947.

Sprays of evergreen, wreaths and holly, red candles and a huge Santa Claus will decorate the North Shore Golf club next Saturday evening, Dec. 13, when the Infant Welfare circle of the Appleton King's Daughters sponsors the 15th annual charity ball. Mrs. William Buchanan is in charge of decorations and she will be assisted by Mrs. R. A. Peterson and Mrs. J. R. Benton.

10 YEARS AGO
Saturday, Dec. 8, 1962.

It's official — Appleton's spanking new parking structure at Washington and Division streets will be opened to the motoring public Monday morning.

Officially named the West Ramp by the common council this week, the bi-level parking facility cost $360,000 and represents the city's first venture into the structure field.

Prison reform test program suggested

FOND DU LAC, Wis. (AP) — The chairman of a prison study committee, having censured the Wisconsin penal system's budget, called recently for support of his panel's suggestions for closing penitentiaries

Raymond Malmquist said the state should establish an experimental center to test his committee's recommendation that prisons be replaced with community-based rehabilitation programs

"Let's put the institutions where the judges are using them," he said, remarking that Waupun State Prison ideally would be better located were it in the Milwaukee area, source of many of its inmates.

His Task Force on Offender Rehabilitation stirred debate among penal authorities when it proposed that penitentiaries be replaced in a few years with centers that would rehabilitate inmates closer to their homes and jobs

Speaking to a civic club, Malmquist said controversy seems to be centering on a date for closing. There seems to be less disagreement with the theory behind community-based rehabilitation, he said

In his audience was Warden Ray Gray of Waupun, who inquired about Malmquist's proposal for a test center.

Malmquist said the test suggestion was among the committee's recommendations. However, specifics of a rehabilitation center were not thoroughly outlined by the committee, he added

Gov Patrick J. Lucey had been urged earlier in the day by Malmquist to reject the $102 million budget requested by the Division of Corrections for the 1973-75 fiscal biennium.

The request is about $13.6 million greater than the existing budget, contrasting with a decrease in prison enrollment, Malmquist said.

He censured what he called the division's intention of keeping all penal facilities operating despite the committee's recommendations.

Question legality of free classes for senior citizens

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The question of whether Wisconsin senior citizens could be allowed to audit classes in the University of Wisconsin system free was sent to the state attorney general's office for an answer Thursday by the UW Board of Regents Education Committee

The move was taken after several regents voiced fears that permitting persons 65 and older to attend university courses with only a charge for books, special material or laboratory breakage would be considered illegal discrimination

The charge for auditing a course, which is now the same as it costs a full time student taking the class, would also be cut 50 per cent for all other students under the proposal, which was also sent to campus chancellors for a recommendation.

Regent John Lavine of Chippewa Falls, who proposed the plan, had urged fast approval so senior citizens would have time to register for second semester courses which will begin early next year.

Lavine argued that the proposal would make the UW system available to every state resident.

Drawing trumps fast doesn't always pay

"Very unlucky hand," South complained as he scored 50 points for the opponents "I'd have made the hand if the ace of clubs were onside or if the diamonds had broken" This was all very true, but the contract was unbeatable (if properly played) despite these bad breaks.

West opened the queen of spades and continued the suit until South ruffed the third round Declarer then hastened to draw three rounds of trumps and led a club toward dummy

East captured the king of clubs with the ace and returned the jack of clubs to dummy's queen When the diamonds failed to break 3-3, South had to lose another trick Down one

The point that South overlooked was that therr was no need to hurry to draw all of the trumps. He could find out about the clubs before drawing trumps It was even possible to find out about the diamond break before drawing all of the trumps

There were two different ways to make four hearts Both depended on leaving the trumps alone

The simplest way is to lead a club after ruffing the third spade East takes the ace of clubs and returns a club to dummy's queen. South ruffs a club, gets to dummy with a diamond and ruffs the last club Only now is it time to draw three rounds of trumps. Declarer then wins the last two tricks with top diamonds.

Answer: Bid 3-NT. Since you have 10 points in high cards you know that the combined count must be 26 to 28 points This should be enough to provide a reasonable play for game.

Thieu reorganizing government to help broaden his power

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu is planning to reorganize his administration and label it the "National Solidarity Government" in efforts to broaden his political base, official government sources said today.

It is the latest in a number of moves Thieu is working on to gain a strong hand in a political struggle with the Viet Cong over the political shape of South Vietnam after an anticipated cease-fire.

The sources said Thieu held consultations with both nationalist and moderate opposition political leaders in shaping the new government.

A number of cabinet posts now held by Thieu cronies and military men loyal to him are being offered to political figures representing various parties and groups, the sources said.

U.S. political observers have criticized Thieu in the past for not making such a move years ago. But now a transition from the battlefields to the political arena apparently has forced Thieu's hand.

Thieu is expected to announce the reshuffle Tuesday when he appears before the National Assembly to ask for an extension of his six-months' special decree powers.

The extension request is also another move designed to tighten Thieu's control in areas already under Saigon rule.

The six-months' special powers, invoked to deal with North Vietnam's offensive across the demilitarized zone, expire Dec. 28. They give Thieu authority to sign any bill without legislative approval in matters dealing with national security, defense, economics and finance.

In still another action to deal politically with the Viet Cong, Thieu's main vehicle, the Democracy party, will be reorganized in the next two weeks. Its membership is expected to number about 180,000, with the eventual objective of encompassing all nationalist and antiCommunist groups in South Vietnam.

Teamsters quit firm probing Watergate case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters president Frank E. Fitzsimmons, after failing to get the union's law firm to hold back its pursuit of the Watergate bugging case, is moving Teamsters legal business to a firm which will soon include a top White House political operative.

Sources familiar with the events say Fitzsimmons, one of President Nixon's closest labor supporters, expressed dissatisfaction that the firm of lawyer Edward Bennett Williams was exploring the Watergate affair for the Democratic party. Fitzsimmons indicated he was partially reflecting White House displeasure, the sources said.

The White House official involved is Charles W. Colson, counsel to the President. Colson hired and supervised one of the seven men indicted in the break-in at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate building.

He has said he will be leaving the White House soon and is to join a law firm with his past legal partner, Charles H. Morin.

Morin confirmed Friday, with union authorization, that his firm was becoming the Teamsters' legal representative. Before an Associated Press story disclosed the move, Morin had said only that his firm had held "very, very preliminary" talks with the Teamsters.

The Teamsters issued a statement Friday night also confirming the switch but denying that it was related to the Watergate case.

"Fitzsimmons said it is absolutely untrue and ludicrous to suggest that the Teamsters changed law firms because the union wanted pressure any member of Williams, Connolly and Califano to retreat from its role in representing the Democratic party in the Watergate case ...," the statement said.

Morin said the Teamsters move did not depend on Colson joining the firm. He also said he had not discussed the move with Colson.

Colson had been involved in a Teamsters matter earlier this year when he recommended to Nixon that the prison sentence of former Teamsters president James R. Hoffa be commuted. Hoffa was later freed.

The union endorsed Nixon for president. Colson said earlier this week that the endorsement and the release of Hoffa were not connected.

the crash. She ran outside and saw Mrs. Sladewski.

"She crawled out on her knees from under the plane," Mrs. Pristade said. "She was alive. I don't know how she got out. It was miraculous."

Two houses down the street, Diane Haynes said she "saw wood splintering. There was a crash and I saw a couple of people in the street covered with blood."

Others who lived nearby said the plane's engines didn't sound right: it would roar and then sputter, roar and sputter. Florence Strysic said it sounded like a car engine dying out.

Sanguine decision in 2 years?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assurances that no final decision would be made concerning Project Sanguine for at least two years were made by the Navy Friday at a meeting with Wisconsin officials.

Rear Adm. Robert Kaufman, director of strategic submarines for the Navy, said Wisconsin was still viewed as a logical and prime candidate for the system, which would be used to communicate with deep running submarines throughout the world.

But Kaufman said there are also other possible sites for the project, which is now in the experimental stages.

"The choice will not be made until after the phase of research and development is completed, a couple of years from now at a minimum," he said.

The meeting requested by Wisconsin Gov. Patrick Lucey was held in the office of Sen. Gaylord Nelson and attended by both of them and Rep. David Obey, whose 7th District includes the Wisconsin site under consideration for the project.

The governor said he had told the Navy of what he described as "the broadly held feeling of general resistance to the idea" in Wisconsin.

The Navy assured him, Lucey said, that no action would be taken which would damage the area from an environmental, recreational or mineral development standpoint.

But the governor said he had learned that the Navy had buried 17 miles of cable in Wisconsin in order to conduct tests of the system.

The Navy had estimated at one time it would need 150 square miles for the project, it would cost more than $1 billion and it could only be constructed in northern Wisconsin because of its low conductive rock formation.

But the Navy said Friday that only 55 square miles would be needed—and even that area would still be available for other uses. And it said the project would cost between $100 million and $300 million.

Lucey said research has shown that the project could be built in a number of other states and that it might even be fragmented and built in more than one location.

There are serious questions about whether it will ever be deployed," the governor added.

In a related development, the University of Wisconsin Board of Regents accepted Friday a $36,000 federal grant to extend a study being done by a team of UW-Parkside researchers on the environmental effects of the project.

A Parkside biologist, chwmist and a physicist are working together in an effort to determine whether exposure to an electromagnetic field, such as that which would be generated by Sanguine, would produce changes in cell growth and development of a slime mold found on decaying vegetation.

The organism is common in the northern Wisconsin region where the project might be constructed.

State warns of liquor violation

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Persons who buy liquor in Illinois and bring it into Wisconsin were warned Friday that they face penalties ranging up to 90 days in jail and a $500 fine for such importation and up to one year in jail and a $1,000 fine for reselling it in Wisconsin.

H. R. Herron, supervisor of the beverage and cigarette tax unit in the state Department of Revenue, said some Wisconsin residents are buying as many as 30 cases at a time and taking it across the state line.

His agency has been receiving an increasing number of complaints, he said, about large numbers of Wisconsin residents purchasing liquor at lower Illinois prices and in larger half gallon quantities.

Astronauts oversleep hopes will fill missing gaps about that world's evolution.

The astronauts are to move into lunar orbit on Sunday.

In the rehearsal Cernan and Schmitt, who are to be the 11th and 12th Americans to visit the moon, float through a tunnel connecting the command ship, America, with the smaller lunar module. Then they close the hatch connecting the two craft, sealing themselves from the command ship to test oxygen and other systems.

Evans remains aboard America, just as he will when his crewmates land on the moon.

Cernan, the 38-year-old commander of the final Apollo, and Schmitt, a Harvard-trained geologist and the first U.S. scientist in space, boarded Challenger for the first time Friday and found it in good shape.

"It looks clean," Schmitt told Mission Control during the two-hour inspection. "Everything is fine looking. Looks like there's some life in the old bird."

The astronauts detected only one small problem—one of 12 latches sealing Challenger and America together failed to completely engage. Evans inspected the latch, but on orders from the ground, did not engage it. Mission Control said the failure causes no serious concern since only nine of the latches need to engage for a secure linkup.

During the inspection Friday, Cernan and Schmitt loaded Challenger with the film magazines, tools and other equipment they will need on the moon's surface. They also checked the moon lander's switches and instruments and told Mission Control all were operating properly.

Little preparation for "Progressive Drop"

BY CAPPY DICK

Stormy days call for fun that's suitable indoors Today's project for boys and girls fulfills the requirement It is a game called "Progressive Drop which, because the equipment is readily available around the house can be undertaken with little preparation

Progressive Drop

Line up four items — a clothespin a big paper cup an empty facial tissue box and an empty shoe box Place the latter three in a row on the floor as in the illustration The fourth object — the clothespin — is to be held in your hand

As the first step in the game stand above the paper cup and try to drop the clothespin into it Try as many times as necessary keeping track of how many you require When you have succeeded stand above the tissue box and attempt to drop the paper cup (containing the clothespin) into it Keep a count of the number of attempts you make The final step (figure three) requires you to lift the tissue box containing the cup and clothespin and try to drop it into the shoe box Your score will be the total number of attempts you made before you succeeded in all three progressive drops

Repeat the routine and see if you can improve your score

LU students will perform

Three Lawrence University Conservatory students will be featured in the Green Bay Symphony's concert at 8 p.m. Sunday in Green Bay's West High School auditorium.

The students are winners of the Green Bay Symphony Young Artists' competition this year. First place winner Deborah Egekvist, a senior flutist from Edina, Minn., will perform the first movement of Carl Nielsen's Concerto. Miss Egekvist has studied in summer programs under Joseph Mariano at the Eastman School of Music and James Pappoulsakis, second flutist in the Boston Symphony at Tanglewood.

Anne Simonett of Little Falls, Minn., won second place honors with her interpretation of the first movement of Piano Concerto in D flat major by Khatchaturian, which she will perform in the coming concert. Miss Simonett, a junior at Lawrence, distinguished herself last year in the Wisconsin Federation of Music Clubs competition which afforded the winners an opportunity to perform in a televised concert.

Singing "Depuis le Jour" from Charpentier's opera, "Louise" will be third place winner, Marcia Mittelstadt. Miss Mittelstadt, a soprano from Hartford, won first prize in the National Federation of Music Clubs competition two years ago. An experienced soloist at Lawrence, she sang the lead in Lawrence Opera Theatre's production of "The Consul" last year and was a soloist in last season's choral production of Hovhaness' "Magnificat."

Musical groups busy at UWO

OSHKOSH — Five musical groups at the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh will be heard in concerts Monday through Wednesday evenings in the Music Hall of the Arts and Communication Center.

Each concert will be at 8 p.m. and will be open to the public without charge. Parking will be available in the university parking lot at Algoma Boulevard and Woodland Avenue.

Monday evening's concert will feature the Percussion Ensemble under the direction of Gene Pollart. Both the Regimental Band, directed by Dr. Thomas E. Neice, and the Titan Band, directed by Dr. Alvin J. Curtis, will be heard in Tuesday night's concert. Ernest Tete is director of the University Chroale and the Bel Canto Chorus which is presenting Wednesday evening's program.

RIPON — The Ripon College Music Department will perform its annual Christmas Concert at 8:15 tonight and at 4:15 p.m. Sunday in Demmer Recital Hall of the C. J. Rodman Center for the Arts. The public is invited.

Each of the Department's four musical groups will take part in the concert. Directed by Donald Spies, the Collegium Musicum will perform a mixture of plainchant and polyphonic pieces of the 15th and 16th centures. The Chamber Singers, directed by Douglas Morris, will sing three English Medieval carols in contemporary settings.

Under Donald Cuthbert's direction, the Symphonic Wind Ensemble will do Sleepers Wake by Bach, Variants on a Nedieval Theme by Norman Dello Joio, and Train Ride from Winter Holiday by Sergei Prokofieff.

After an intermission, Raymond Stahura will direct the Choir and Orchestra in Magnificat in D by Bach, a Frederick work.

Soloists will be Gail Dobish, freshman, soprano from Oshkosh; Jane Steffen, senior, alto from Madison; James Dahlman, senior, tenor from Milwaukee; and Douglas Morris, bass.

Original performer in Grand Ole Opry is ill

FRANKLIN, Tenn. (AP) — Kirk McGee of Franklin, 73, half of a duo prominent in the country-music field for about half a century, is hospitalized in fair condition with heart trouble.

McGee plays banjo, fiddle and guitar while brother Sam plays the flat-top guitar.

They are among the original performers on the Grand Ole Opry, but Kirk's performances have been curtailed because of his heart condition.

Movie review

Ups and downs

BY DAVID F. WAGNER
Post-Crescent Arts Editor

As a play, "Oh! Calcutta!" was widely criticized not for its abundance of total nudity but rather for it being a crashing bore. As a movie, "Oh! Calcutta!" (now playing at the Marc 1, Appleton, and Time, Oshkosh) can be scored for its inconsistencies.

Frankly, it's a film of ups and downs. It starts incredibly slowly and, during the first two-thirds, nearly puts the audience to sleep. Several people walked out midway through on the night I attended.

Unfortunately for them, they missed a couple of excellent sequences near the end, notably a modern dance by two nudes — one male and one female. The dance was quite sexual in movements and was performed beautifully by attractive, athletic young performers. It gave ammunition to the growing school of thought that dancing and diving are two fields of endeavor which should be performed au naturel, because both depend so greatly on the line of the body, which is interrupted by clothing.

For those unfamiliar with "Oh! Calcutta!", it was the brainstorm of Kenneth Tynan, the British author-critic. He commissioned a group of writers to author short skits based on the idea they would be performed naked. Among others, John Lennon, Jules Feiffer and Sam Shepard (the now deceased osteopath) participated. The experiment bore no important theatrical fruits, unless padding Tynan's pocketbook enriches the arts.

What is the movie worth? Actually, not much. It's not for those shocked by nudity (obviously) or by gamy language or by racy sexual situations. Even those not offended by the subjects may find it an unrewarding couple of hours. Yet, it's a sure bet that many will attend, even if a minority leave really satisfied. Curiosity of most is too great to pass it by.

The film probably is better than the play, merely because director Jacques Levy is able to use trick photography and an outside segment to break up the monotony. To be sure, there is a fair amount of laughs and some of the writing is bluntly clever, but for me, most of it seemed forced, unnatural and obvious. Thank heavens for the dance.

. . . the gover'ment is tryin' to take all the trouble out o' livin'. Too bad! It's larnin' to put up with things, and to pay for one's mistakes that makes a people strong.

First Kinderkonzert of Milwaukee season

MILWAUKEE — The first Kinderkonzert of the 1972-73 season will be given at 1 and 3:30 p.m. today in Uihlein Hall of the Performing Arts Center.

Kenneth Schermerhorn will conduct the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra in these special children's concerts "Trumpets and Trolls" is the program theme.

Added life will be given to the program with a real live troll by the name of Theopholis. Theopholis will be played by Jeffery Tambor of the Milwaukee Repertory Theater. He will utilize a huge storybook to tell the children the story behind the music and warn them of the important things to listen for.

New format

This week, The Post-Crescent's daily entertainment page is debuting a new format for our daily television schedules.

In the past, we listed programs separately under a heading for each channel, which required the reader to look in several places to see what was on at a given time. With our new format, all programs for each time slot are in the same place, which will make it easier for readers and, as it works out, consume less space on the page. This format is similar to the one used in our Showtime TV log section.

Another advantage of the new style is that it is not as static in appearance. We now are able to "wrap" the logs around advertising, whereas the old format required a rectangular box which limited display possibilities of other articles on the page.

We hope readers are pleased with the convenience of the new format and we welcome suggestions and-or opinions. Address mail to David F. Wagner, arts editor, The Post-Crescent, Appleton, Wi 54911.

Ted, Lou are friends

8-8:30 Channels 2-7 — The Mary Tyler Moore Show is a beauty with some great stuff between Lou (Ed Asner) and Ted Baxter (Ted Knight). Seems Lou has to go to the hospital for minor surgery and Ted visits. During the visits we learn Ted considers Lou his best friend. Ted even springs for an expensive bottle of Scotch for "big lug." When Lou returns to the newsroom, his attitude towards Ted is so completely different, Mary and Murray (Gavin MacLeod) can't believe it.

8:30-9 Channels 2-7 — Carol (Marcia Wallace) is suddenly swept off her feet by Howard (Bill Daily) on The Bob Newhart Show. Good-hearted Emily (Suzanne Pleshette) decides to bring the romantics together, news which doesn't delight Bob.

9-10 Channels 11-9 — Barry Sullivan and Mary Ann Mobley are guests on The Sixth Sense, he playing a millionaire about to turn over family title and fortune to a son. Miss Mobley (in real life the wife of series star Gary Collins) has visions of her husband dead and Rhodes (Collins) tries to help.
